PRESIDENT TO SET SEPT. 12 TO ENROLL IN 18 TO 45 DRAFT

Senate Adopts the Conference Report on Bill, Which Is to Be Signed Today.

CROWDER PERFECTS PLANS

Wilson Is Expected to Issue a Proclamation Setting Date for Registration.

NO MERCY FOR SLACKERS

Department of Justice Will Help Provost Marshal General in Punishing Evaders.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—With the adoption of the conference report on the new Man Power bill by the Senate this afternoon, and the assurance that the War Department's program for the calling of all men between the ages of 18 and 45 who are necessary to obtain military victory would be signed by the Speaker of the House and placed before President Wilson by noon tomorrow, the Provost Marshal General's office today took up the final steps of preparation for the registering and classification of 13,000,000 or more men who will be affected.

It was predicted unofficially that President Wilson would issue a proclamation tomorrow, on signing the bill, and that he would then set Thursday, Sept. 12, as the day for registration. While this date has not been selected definitely, it was generally believed that it would fit in with the plans of the Provost Marshal General, and that by that time he would be able to have complete instructions in the hands of all of the registration boards.

It had been hoped to get the legislation before President Wilson tonight, but at the time the Senate adopted it, the House had adjourned, and it was impossible to again obtain a quorum. The bill, before going to the President, must be signed by the Speaker of the House while that body is in session. This formal action, it was stated, would be taken tomorrow.

In order to leave no stone unturned to obtain rapid action General Crowder, today, when assured that the bill would become law within a few hours, sent this telegram to all draft executives throughout the country:

> On account of approaching classification of new registrants under new law amending Selective Service law by increasing ages, it is imperative that members of Legal Advisory Boards, both permanent and associate, should be prepared to take up the work of aiding and advising registrants and assisting in the administration of the law and regulations immediately following registration under the new law.
> Please take up this matter immediately with the Central Legal Advisory Committee of your State or through such other means as may be necessary, and arrange for preliminary meetings and other necessary steps to be taken to assure efficient and ample personnel organized and ready to

Mill Workers Wire Foch. Decision to Work Labor Day

STAMFORD, Conn., Aug. 30.—Twelve hundred employes of the Stamford rolling mills today voted to work all day Labor Day, and sent a cablegram to Marshal Foch, Commander in Chief of the allied armies, assuring him that they would see to it that his armies got 100 per cent. production in their mills every day.

I. W. W. LEADERS GET 20-YEAR TERMS

Haywood and 14 of His Chief Aids Also Fined $20,000 for Anti-War Activities.

EIGHTY OTHERS SENTENCED

Receive Terms of from Ten Years to Ten Days—Judge Landis Pleased with Verdict.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—William D. Haywood, "uncrowned king" of the Industrial Workers of the World, and fourteen of his chief aids in the conspiracy to overturn the American war program, were sentenced to serve twenty years in the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., by Federal Judge K. M. Landis here late today.

Ten-year sentences were imposed upon thirty-three of the organization's leaders, five-year sentences on thirty-three, one year and one day on twelve defendants, and ten-day sentences on two others. The cases against Benjamin Schraeger, the Chicago writer, and Pietro Nigra of Spring Valley, Ill., were continued.

All sentences on the four counts in the indictment will run concurrently. Fines ranging from $20,000 on Haywood and his chief aids down to $5,000 were imposed. Ninety days is granted in which to file a bill of exceptions, and a stay of seven days in which to petition for bail.

"It is the closing chapter in America's biggest criminal case," said Frank K. Nebeker, chief prosecutor.

"We are confident a new trial will be granted," said George F. Vanderver, chief counsel for the defense.

Ovation for Haywood Squelched.

There was silence in the courtroom as Haywood and his fourteen chief assistants were called before the bar. As "Big Bill" arose from his seat a group of women, who had been weeping, started a mild ovation, which was silenced quickly. George Andreytchine, the young Russian poet, whose stormy career since his exile from Russia for plotting a revolution, is an outstanding phase of the I. W. W., was next called. As he stepped forward he smiled and blew a kiss to his pretty bride, who waved her handkerchief.

Vincent St. John, who formerly held Haywood's office of general Secretary-Treasurer, was sentenced to serve ten years at Leavenworth; J. A. MacDonald, Seattle, publisher of a radical paper, was sentenced to serve ten years, while J. T. ("Third-Rail Red") Doran, a Western leader, and Harrison George of Pittsburgh, whose printed vision of President Wilson and his Cabinet in

Aviator Hitchcock Escapes to Switzerland; Jumps from Train, Walks 80 Miles to Border

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 30, (Associated Press.)—Lieutenant Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., of Westbury, L. I., who, when a member of the Lafayette Flying Squadron last March was captured by the Germans, has escaped from a German prison camp and arrived here. Hitchcock, who is only 18 years old and is the son of Major Thomas Hitchcock, jumped from a train near Ulm, in Württemberg, and walked eighty miles to the Swiss border, near Schaffhausen. The aviator is returning to the United States immediately.

Elated over the report that Lieutenant Thomas Hitchcock had escaped from a German prison camp, friends and relatives of the young aviator at Westbury, L. I., yesterday were confident that the report would be confirmed and that not many days would pass before the flier would be back in this country Major Thomas Hitchcock, father of the aviator and commander of the aviation camp at Mineola, could not be reached last night, but Mrs. Hitchcock, the mother, telephoned to her Westbury home that she was eagerly awaiting confirmation of the news.

"I believe the story to be true," she said. "I am overjoyed and too full for utterance."

Lieutenant Hitchcock was reported captured on March 6, this information reaching his parents through the International Red Cross at Geneva. According to that report, he fell behind the German lines after he had been wounded in battle with three enemy planes. He was first taken to the prison camp at Saarbrücken, and later was transferred to Giesen, and again to a camp in Bavaria.

Before the United States entered the war, Lieutenant Hitchcock was recognized as an expert horseman and polo player. He was a student at St. Paul's School, in Concord, N. H., last year when he presented himself for enlistment in the aviation service. Although he passed the 100 hours' endurance test in the air, he was rejected because of his age.

In June, 1917, he went to France, where he had further training in the French air service. He was then assigned to the famous Lafayette Escadrille with several other Americans. Last February he brought down two German fliers, and received the Croix de Guerre with two palms and the prize money awarded by the Lafayette Escadrille. After he had been flying for several months he was promoted from Corporal to Sergeant. He had not been transferred to the United States forces when he was captured, and last July when he was still a prisoner, he was made a Lieutenant by General Pétain in recognition of his "gallant work."

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY, Aug. 30.—The places captured by the British today and last night are so many that the mere list of them is long, from north of the Scarpe, where the Scotsmen are on the outskirts of Plouvain, after their long and gallant fighting, to Bullecourt, which the Londoners and West Lancashire troops took yesterday, going further east today than we have ever been before and away down south beyond Bapaume and toward Péronne.

In the First Army the Canadians, following up yesterday's splendid attack of the Londoners, made a new assault today, and are within a few hundred yards of the Drocourt-Queant line, and in the Third Army the New Zealanders and other troops are getting out into the open country and on the high ground to the north and east of Bapaume.

Roses Amid Bapaume Ruins.

I picked some roses today in Bapaume, red rambler roses, which would make a garland for the steel helmet of one of the New Zealand boys, to whom the honor is most due for the capture of the town. Bapaume is not a fragrant place for rose lovers, and when I went into it early this morning, while a new battle was in progress outside, German shells were smashing among the houses, and there was a smell of corruption and high explosives in its ruined streets. But I noticed how, against a broken wall, these roses were in bloom and marigolds and sweet williams among the red brick dust of the ruins. I picked a bunch out of sheer maudlin sentiment, for there is sentiment about the recapture of Bapaume for all the British soldiers and for me.

It is the second time we have entered it in triumph after stern fighting up a long, long trail. I shall never forget the thrill of that first entry, on March 17 of last year, when I had the luck to go in with the Australians up the long road from Albert, past Posieres and Le Sar and the Butte de Warlencourt, and those frightful places where thousands of British had fallen on the way. It seemed then that Bapaume was the goal of victory, and, in spite of the dreadful sights about, one's spirit rose as one passed each shell crater and drew nearer to the town.

A repetition of experiences is never quite so fresh in sensation as the first adventure, yet, to get again into Bapaume after its loss last March, when the German army came rolling the tide back over the Somme battlefields, was a thing worth doing. It was another landmark of history, made this time by the New Zealanders and English regiments fighting beside them.

Starting a New Day's Battle.

I set out early to get there, and saw the dawn rise for this new day of war. The fields were pale in the first light of day, and there was a

PARIS, Aug. 30.—Since returning here I have had an opportunity to glean French impressions regarding the events in the Marne salient which initiated and laid the solid foundation for the changed order of things. Americans are loath to make large claims for themselves, and neither at the front nor in Paris have I found any spirit of boastfulness.

One meets daily American officers who have participated in action in the last three months. They are invariably careful in what they say, and especially deprecate inferring too much future success from what has happened in the past.

I saw yesterday Major Gen. Harbord, under whose command the 2d Division was so active between Château-Thierry and Soissons, and who has now been put in charge of the supply service by General Pershing. I could get only monosyllabic replies to questions about the American performance.

The French, however, are more communicative, and while all are proud of Foch's strategy, they not only give credit to the Americans for splendid fighting, but they say that the confidence and push of our army leader was the big element leading to the adoption of the offensive by the Generalissimo. He put the whole force of his personality behind his sure knowledge of his men. His confidence impressed headquarters, and aided in removing the natural doubts as to whether we were yet strong enough to pass to the offensive.

Surprised at Pershing's Confidence.

Pershing knows his material and with what little training, judged by the European standard, and provided the training was suited to the peculiar habits and temperament of Americans, they could be trusted to take care of themselves. French officers who were in touch with events from June onward say they were surprised at Pershing's insistance on the absolute dependability of American troops and their special usefulness in an offensive.

It was something of a shock to their conservatism that he was willing to put them in the battle line in large units. He backed his arguments with uncompromising faith in his troops in the critical days when the decision had to be taken by the high command whether to remain on the defensive or take the offensive.

My French informants say that, strong as was Pershing's guarantee of the American troops, they made good with a margin. The system of limited objectives, which the French had wisely been using to curb losses, was found in practice to be somewhat binding on our soldiers. In one instance an American division which was assigned to an eight-mile limit reached it at 10 o'clock the same morning, having already taken as prisoners 3,100 Germans, exclusive of wounded. They could have gone further, but, of course, played the game as directed by the French army command, under whose orders they were operating.

New Spirit Inspires Allies.

The tradition and experience of the French have been invaluable in giving the Americans the right kind of start and safeguarding them against over-exuberance, just as the élan of these new elements has injected fresh life and spirit into the armies which so

PERONNE IN GREATER PERIL

British Cross Somme to the South—Germans Evacuate Bailleul, on the Lys.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—East and northeast of Bapaume the British today continued to gain ground in the face of increasing German resistance, which in one section of the battlefront held Haig's men by counterattacks.

This was at Bullecourt, on the Hindenburg line, and at Hendecourt, to the east of that line. These two villages, captured by the British early in the day, were found untenable under the German assaults, and the British withdrew to the west of them.

Elsewhere, however, progress was general, if not spectacular. Several villages on the Arras-Bapaume front were taken, Haig's forces advancing both on the Arras-Cambrai and the Bapaume-Cambrai roads.

Further south the British north of the Somme pushed their way toward Péronne, taking Combles and Cléry.

There are now no Germans on the British front south or west of the river in the course of the great bend at Péronne, and the British are unofficially reported to have crossed to the east bank of the stream south of the city, near La Chapelette.

In the Lys salient the Germans have evacuated Bailleul, which is now in the hands of the British.

Smash Ahead on the Whole Line.

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, Aug. 30, (Associated Press.)—The fighting British armies again smashed their way forward today all along the line. There has been very heavy fighting almost everywhere between the Somme and Scarpe Rivers, and under the force of repeated blows delivered with machine-like pricision the foe has been forced to abandon many more towns and extensive strips of ground.

Once more the Germans have suffered terrible losses. The British have freed all the country south and west of the Somme, the last Germans being driven behind the river this morning. Even there the enemy is not finding rest, for the British have crossed the stream at least at one place south of La Chapellette.

From Péronne southward first the British cannon and then the French guns are hurling projectiles, big and little, on the other side of the river. Just north of the Somme, after it turns to the west at Péronne, the British have captured Cléry and are pressing on toward Péronne.

The Germans have been trying ever since the fall of Bapaume to hold the line running along the road between that town and Péronne. British patrols, however, actually have reached Le Transloy, directly on the road, and it is reported that Le Transloy has fallen and that a fierce battle within a battle is raging almost along the whole length of the road.

Hard fighting is going on around Beaulencourt, which is astride the road between Le Transloy and Bapaume. The Germans hold the major portion of this village for the moment, but they seem destined to be thrown out from it. A bitter struggle also is in progress at Morval, southwest of Le Transloy. The fighting appears to have reached a hand-to-hand character, and the Germans are said to have suffered from the British bayonets. Other towns in this immediate neighborhood fell this morning or during last night.

From this locality the line of battle swings wide around Bapaume, and there has been more heavy fighting

Germany Now Bars All Allied Papers To Aid in Checking People's Pessimism

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The sale of newspapers published in allied countries has been prohibited in Germany for some time past. Previously English, French, and American newspapers could easily be bought at shops and bookstalls and were allowed to circulate freely, but now they are obtainable only by special permits, which are issued to privileged persons, such as members of the Reichstag.

The prohibition apparently is intended to counteract the growing pessimism of the German people, and is attributed to fear on the part of the German military authorities lest the truth about the American effort should become known.

GENEVA, Aug. 30.—Strikes involving 200,000 workmen have broken out at Bochum, in Westphalia, according to dispatches received here today from Munich.

Three thousand strikers have been sent to the front and 8,000 deported from the region under escort. Troops are guarding the town, it is said, as riots are feared.

Bochum is a great seat of the Prussian steel and iron industry, and has extensive coal mines. It is twenty-six miles northeast of Düsseldorf.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY NEAR NOYON, Aug. 30.—Noyon lies before me eastward, nestling around its great church and quaint town hall, the square recalling a dignified past that goes back to Charlemagne. None but actual combatants can yet enter the town. Prisoners say it was extensively mined by the retreating boches, and it is most certainly a lake of mustard and other poisonous gases.

Beneath the faint and uncertain sunshine red roofs and white walls are still standing, and the ruined buildings which cannot be separately distinguished—for a large part of the city is now destroyed—are covered by a shifting canopy of smoke and dust and the gas of fresh shellbursts.

A cavalry barracks, a large brick rectangle on the north side of the town, are on fire. The high nave and choir of the cathedral seem intact, but clouds of smoke emerging from immediately behind and a finer column rising from two great square towers as though they were chimneys, make it only too probable that the building is doomed.

Beyond the soft green foreground of orchards and meadows there lie on my left the battered village of Larbroye and the Mountain of Pourquericourt, which General Humbert's troops took almost without opposition by a very clever enveloping movement yesterday, and on my right is the cone of Mont Renaud, now all bare save for an upstanding beard of charred tree trunks and two heaps of white stone that were its château and farm.

The next important active sector is the corner where the Ailette passes near to Pierremande and the western edge of the lower Forest of Coucy. The Oise valley cannot be in these days of powerful artillery what it was in the far past for marching armies, a valuable corridor of invasion or reaction, but it has evident strategical importance in the present juncture. Here the French troops this morning crossed the Oise-Aisne Canal. They afterward crossed the Ailette at Champs. On either side of Champs a bridgehead over a mile wide on the Ailette was secured.

Loss of Juvigny Grave.

Most grave of all is the attack further south in the neighborhood of Juvigny. This part of the enterprise had been intrusted to American troops, whom I saw coming up by a forced march the other night, and I imagine the French Generalissimo could not have paid a greater compliment to Pershing's men than to give them this heavy task, heavy, for the country is cut with deep-wooded ravines where and in

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, Aug. 29.—The American troops, fighting side by side with the French north of Soissons, are maintaining constant and telling pressure against the army of General von Boehm Rushed into the battle yesterday morning, three hours after getting into the sector, in an hour and a half they had made a good advance, reaching the narrow gauge railroad running from Chavigny northwest to Juvigny. Their presence there brought savage counterattacks by the 7th German Division of Prussians. Despite these attacks the Americans maintained good gains. Our guns are constantly pounding the German positions, and for miles in front of our lines can be seen black smoke arising from many points within the German lines.

Interrogation of prisoners shows that the Americans' appearance in the line was a complete surprise to the Germans. Among the Americans fighting in this sector is a unit which the French have christened [deleted by censor,] and the Americans are proud of the title.

Meanwhile local fighting of an intense nature continues along the Vesle. The Germans in the last twenty-four hours have taken the initiative and hurled several attacks against our positions north of the river, including a strong attempt at Fismette, lying north of Fismes. The Germans claim in last night's communiqué to hold it. Their object, it is known, was to put the Americans back across the river, but today our line still lies north of the river at the points where the Germans attacked, and our positions have undergone no important change. It may be interesting to watch and see who holds Fismes and Fismette a week from today.

Opening of the Attack.

Aug. 28, (Delayed.)—Leaping into a new attack three hours after reaching their sector, a small unit of American troops attacked the Germans this morning in a local operation north of Soissons. The fighting is continuing. The attacking Americans were a complete surprise to the Germans, who had the French opposed to them at midnight, and seven hours later found Yankee doughboys.

The Americans are fighting with General Mangin's 10th French Army, with which other American troops fought so successfully a short distance away to the south of Soissons in the attack starting July 18.

The Americans who hit the Germans this morning were brought

FRENCH CROSS NORD CANAL

Press On Germans' Retreat North of Noyon, Taking Chevilly and Beaurains.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Mont St. Siméon, the main defensive position of the Germans in the tip of the Noyon salient, has been occupied by the French, according to the night official bulletin from Paris.

Besides achieving this notable success east of Noyon, the French have crossed the Canal du Nord at two points northwest of the city—Catigny and Beaurains.

French and American troops fighting together on the high ground north of Soissons have captured the villages of Chavigny and Cuffies and advanced their line to the west of Crouy. [Crouy is two and a half miles northeast of Soissons, on the highroad to Laon and just east of the railway to that city.]

Champs, a village on the northern bank of the Ailette, was stormed by French troops today.

FRENCH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Aug. 30.—The armies of General Humbert and General Mangin have made highly important strategic gains. North of the Oise General Humbert's troops have crossed the unfinished canal and occupied Chemilly on a hill overlooking the Valley of the Meve and part of Genvry, in the hills two miles north of Noyon. East of Noyon Mont St. Siméon was carried.

Yesterday morning General Humbert's forces, converging in three columns on the town, established themselves in Noyon, passed through and joined up with the army of General Mangin, which crossed at Morlincourt.

An attempt by the enemy to recapture Noyon by counterattack yesterday failed. Mont St. Siméon, 600 feet high, which protected the enemy's right flank, was attacked at 9 o'clock this morning. The summit was reached by middle afternoon, and the French thus established a great natural rampart upon which the enemy counted to guard his flank during the withdrawal before the attacks of General Debeny and General Rawlinson.

With the two main lines of defense—the unfinished canal and the Oise heights—pierced, the enemy's only natural line of resistance between his present unsteady positions and the old Hindenburg line is the Noyon-St. Quentin road from Ham to Beriancourt; but here his right would be open to attack from the Oise heights.

Gains of Great Strategic Value.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 30, (Associated Press.)—This evening there remains to the Germans no other position to fall back upon west of the Hindenburg line than a line running from Ham to Beriancourt. The Third Army, continuing its progress of the early morning in the region of Noyon, has occupied Mont St. Siméon, while the Canal du Nord was crossed at Chevilly.

The extent of these gains in territory is insignificant, but strategically they are of great importance. The capture of Mont St. Siméon means the loss to the Germans of the main defense point of the salient extending from the canal to the Aisne, while the French crossing of the Canal du Nord obliges the retreating forces to quicken their flight or suffer greater losses.

The violent reaction effected north of Soissons by picked German divisions apparently was intended not only to check the advance of the allied troops over the plateau toward the Chemin des Dames, but to force Marshal Foch to detach troops from other operations and ease the trying situation of the retreating German forces. Today's developments prove that the latter object is no more likely to be attained than the other. The French pressure goes on with continued success, and even the Hindenburg line, the supreme reliance of the Germans, appears this evening far less safe a refuge.

Machine guns have been placed on every point of vantage by the Germans, and the struggle has become a sort of bush fighting. The enemy's machine guns are carefully concealed and command all paths leading up the hills, and are capable of holding up a large force and obliging assaulting troops to dodge and surround the emplacements. It has been found that artillery preparation, however intense, never reaches all of them.

French soldiers, after their experience in Thiescourt Forest, are becoming familiar with this Indian style of fighting, while the German machine gunners left behind so that the infantry may retire with greater security are becoming weary of their task. When captured they complain that they alone have been sacrificed and have been obliged not only to face the French, but to be under fire of their own artillery, shells from the rear falling on the positions they have been left to hold.

Germans Shelling Noyon.

This happened yesterday at Noyon and seemed to be happening today. Shells from the German heavy artillery were falling short all around Mont St. Siméon, and others were falling in Noyon. Those that fell in the city drove out of their hiding place thirty-two German soldiers who had been overlooked by the Zouaves, who cleared the streets yesterday.

The first thing the prisoners did was to appeal for food. They were happy to get out of Noyon, where they were for one night the only inhabitants, for the town has been placed "out of bounds" until the engineers have been able to explore the ruins for death traps such as destroyed the City Hall at Bapaume after last year's retreat.

The heavy German guns have been withdrawn a considerable distance since the day before yesterday. No sound of their firing is heard, and shells arriving in the vicinity of Noyon sound as if they were nearly spent. The historic town, made famous by the familiar saying, "The Germans are still in Noyon," has suffered little from shellfire, so far. The French purposely spared the town, preferring to take it at the point of the bayonet instead of destroying historic monuments. The enemy has boasted he would destroy the city, and the work has begun. It will, in all probability, remain unfinished, for the present fighting mood of the French troops promises further changes in the situation that will oblige the enemy to again take his heavy guns further back.

The total of 150 prisoners taken yesterday and this morning is indicative of the present tactics used by the Germans. They are leaving very few men within reach of their adversaries, but every man is equipped with a quick-firer. These tactics also account for the great number of machine guns captured all over the fighting fronts in recent battles. The count has not yet been made, but it is known that the number is formidable.

The Germans are making the most determined resistance against General Mangin's army in an effort to prevent it from gaining a strong foothold north of the Ailette. A French success in this direction would menace the enemy's communications.

Cavalry was employed mainly by the Germans yesterday, but notwithstanding this display of force the enemy was unable to stay the advance of the French.

HOW BRITISH DROPPED BOMBS ON COLOGNE

Railway Station Hit and Troop Train Wrecked in a Successful Night Raid.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Cologne was bombed by British airmen on Aug. 21, and details have now reached London which enable Captain Paul Bewsher to give the following description of the raid:

"Night had come and clear stars glittered overhead in a cloudless sky. Far away could be seen the black manes of forests and a clear-cut line of hills unobscured by mist. Low in the east hung a brilliant golden moon.

"The thickly clad pilot gave an order to the waiting mechanics and climbed up into the machine. Sitting in his leather-covered seat he tested the two engines which roared with a steady note.

On either side of him was a heavily muffled observer, equipped with maps, pistols, notebooks, and a couple of thermos flasks. He settled himself for the journey. All was ready, the whistle blew, the engines roared with a splendid note of power, the great machine shook itself, began to move across the grass, and thundered triumphantly into the air.

"Soon the airmen crossed the shell-torn area of lines over which star shells were bursting, and moved steadily forward over the curving river which lay glittering like a silver scarf far below them. For a time they saw no lights at all. Metz and Thionville lay in darkness, though here and there a dull red glare revealed the position of the blast furnaces of Briez and Bassin.

"Forty miles behind the lines they began to see villages, the lamplit streets of which, radiating from a centre, made them look like glowing starfish. They passed near Treves, which lay in darkness, although some dandom shells burst high above the town. A pale searchlight, rendered useless by the moonlit night, moved inquiringly to and fro as on and on they flew, steadily picking up bend after bend of the river on the map. They passed over Coblenz and Andoinnach, which glittered like gems, their streets ablaze with lights. The faithful engines on either side chanted a steady song as the machine passed over Bonn and flew on, and then far ahead of them the airmen saw a great cluster of lights on the river—Cologne. Soon they could see two bridges across the river and the light of hughe factories south of the town.

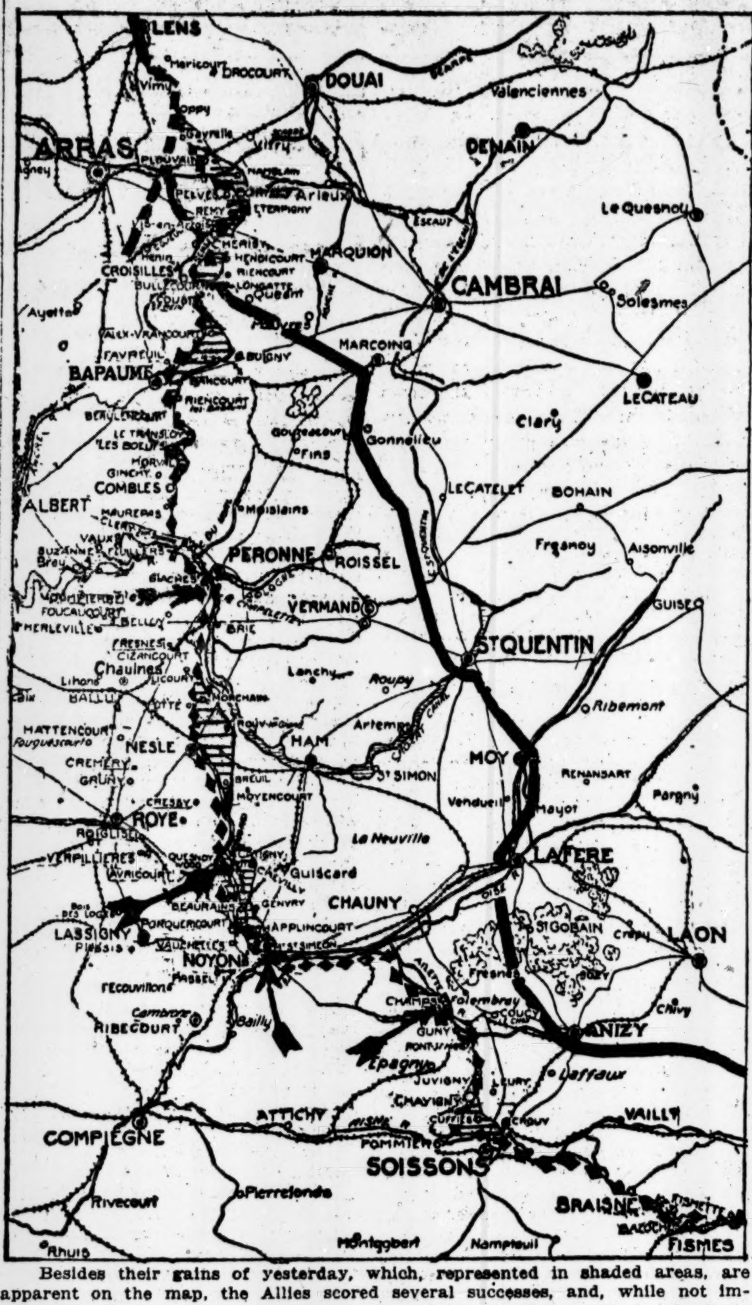
German troops were being transferred to the western front, and at the Cologne railway station there was a state of great activity. Though it was nearly 1 o'clock in the morning, the lamps along the station platforms were blazing.

"The pilot throttled his engines, the observer climbed through a little door into the front cockpit, and over the roofs of the moonlit city whose houses and shadowed streets, churches and the great cathedral could be clearly seen, the giant airplane glided lower and lower. It was a moment of tense excitement. It was no feeling of vindictiveness that possessed the eager, muffled airmen. It was a feeling of exultation at their achievement.

"Taking a line for the railway junction the observer pressed his bomb lever slowly forward, and then again and again over the pale city for a moment hung great yellow bombs ere they began their swift downward rush. The airmen's eyes were fixed on te city below. Lights shone in even lines in the streets. In the railway station could be seen white plumes of smoke rising from railway engines.

"Two great red flashes suddenly appeared near the station, leaving a cloud of smoke. Two others appeared nearer still, and then the six remaining bombs burst on the huge railway junction, and the thunder of the explosions came to the airmen's ears as they sped back above the silver river. Searchlights moved ceaselessly over the town and scattered shells flickered in the starlit skies. In the wrecked station lay a troop train, overturned and torn and splintered. The British airmen had achieved their object."

Yesterday's Battlefront from Arras to the Vesle



Besides their gains of yesterday, which, represented in shaded areas, are apparent on the map, the Allies scored several successes, and, while not important in extent of territory retaken, are highly significant. Such (the location in each case being marked with an arrow) are: The crossing of the Somme by British troops near Chapelette, south of Péronne; the crossing of the Canal du Nord by the French at Catigny and Beaurains; the capture of Mont St. Siméon, east of Noyon, by the French, and the capture, also by the French, of the village of Champs, on the north bank of the Ailette.

The War Situation

By THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The British are experiencing the same difficulty in breaking through the German defenses about Bullecourt that they found in 1917. Yesterday it was reported in the morning that the town had been captured. By nightfall, however, the Germans, realizing the danger to their entire line if this hinge should be broken, counterattacked and retook the position, driving the British back to the western side of the town. This but emphasizes the importance of the successes which have thus far been attained by the Canadian attack in this sector. The German line between Queant and Bullecourt is as important a stretch of territory as exists at this moment on the western front. It comprises ground which the British struggled for in 1917 in a tremendous effort to break the junction at this point and turn the Germans out of the country to the north. But the defense works which had been perfected long before this line had been taken up proved too strong and forced the British to give up the fight. The British this year have progressed further, however, than they did in 1917, but the Germans have made every effort to prevent these gains from affecting their entire system and so far have managed to preserve the greater part of the line intact.

Further south the German retreat is still in progress all the way from Hendecourt to the Somme. There appears to have been no great attempt at resistance to the advance. Even along the Somme about Péronne, the Germans have apparently failed to try to hold the British back. Almost immediately after reaching the Somme River about Péronne the British reported having reached the east bank on both sides of the city. This could not have been done so quickly if at all without great cost unless the Germans had decided to continue the retreat. This would not have held good, of course, if the British advance north of the Somme had carried their lines east of the bend. In such a case the German lines along the river might have been turned and flanked out of position. But this is not the case. The British north of the Somme are still going ahead persistently and making consistent progress. But the line is still lagging behind that to the south of the river, so that the east bank of the bend has not been flanked, nor was there any immediate danger apparently that it was apt to be. Consequently the conclusion is reached that the Germans are falling back toward the Hindenburg line, pivoting as before on that section of the line about Bullecourt and Queant. This fact shows the importance of these towns and the line between them.

This point of view is emphasized by the results of the fighting on the French front. In the fighting north of Noyon the French had a most successful day. Mount St. Simeon, the southern end of the Noyon massif, has been taken. This is probably the most important part of this entire jumble of hills. There are but two points in the entire plateau between Noyon and the extreme northern point of the massif which are higher than Mount St Simeon, and they are only very slightly so. But the importance of this point has to do not alone with this massif. The Canal du Nord is naturally in low ground running due north from Noyon. From the positions which the French took yesterday the entire Canal du Nord for many miles is clearly visible, permitting the French artillery to reach a considerable stretch of the German line by a flanking fire. This has already had its effect. By the assistance of this position the French have already forced a crossing on a front of several miles in the bend of the canal in the centre of which is Chevilly. This town, about three-quarters of a mile from the canal, has been taken and the Germans squeezed out of the entire bend.

The Noyon massif and the Canal du Nord are equally important and are interdependent. The passage of one exposes the other and vice versa. To hold one the Germans have to hold both. As it is now it is doubtful if the Germans hold either. The probabilities are, however, when we take this in connection with what has happened about Peronne that the Germans are retiring toward their old line about the St. Quentin Canal and find it cheaper to get back there quickly rather than to try to stem the advance in the open.

About Soissons the French have forced the Germans to abandon the sharp angle which their line made with the Somme and to round out their positions, but the adjustment is purely local.

BRITISH FLEW LOW IN MANNHEIM RAID

Poison Gas Factories Bombed with Great Effect by New Air Manoeuvre.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—During the last week no fewer than seventeen separate raids into German territory have been carried out by the allied independent air force, which is under the command of a British General.

While extensive damage is known to have been done to important military objectives, such as the railway junction at Treves, the station at Frankfort, and the chemical factory at Saaralben, the most striking feature of the week's work was the raid on the Mannheim poison gas factories, where British airmen, flying at a height of 200 feet, narrowly avoided collision with the factory chimneys.

Although this manoeuvre necessarily increased the personal risk of the airmen, it enabled them to direct their bombs with great accuracy toward the more vulnerable parts of their objective. Every bomb released was seen to hit its target.

The drastic moral effect produced by the bombing airplanes flying at the housetop levels may easily be imagined, and the German defense tactics were for the time paralyzed by the totally unexpected and, indeed, unprecedented nature of the attack, as is shown by the fact that all the British machines returned safely.

In the northern coastal region, Bruges has been bombed nine times, and successful raids have been made upon military works at such places as Zeebrugge and Ostend.

The almost monotonous frequency with which these names appear in the official communiqués tends to blunt the imagination of the public to the real magnitude and significance of the effort which Great Britain is making against this formidable sector of the western front. Scarcely a day passes without at least one raid upon these vital German strongholds. Sometimes three or four raids are made in a single day. Often a squadron attacking one of the objectives, say, at 11 o'clock in the morning, will be relieved by another squadron, say, at noon, which will carry on until relieved by a third squadron, and this over one of the most strongly fortified military positions in Europe and against defensive organizations of the most formidable kind.

Although figures can convey only the slightest notion of the intensive character of the British aerial attacks upon these coastal fortresses, it may be noted that during the last three months the following raids have been made: Upon the German works at Zeebrugge, 72; at Bruges, 63; at Ostend, 64. In addition to these 199 raids, an immense number of separate attacks have been delivered upon other military works in the coastal area.

While German Headquarters reports continue to make claims of German successes in the air fighting on the western front, the official tally made on the British side for the last week shows 74 enemy machines destroyed and 34 driven down out of control, while 32 British machines are reported missing.

HAIG INCREASES HIS GAINS

here. Bancourt, east of Bapaume, fell after being stormed.

Astride the road to Cambrai from Bapaume the British crashed into the Germans and smothered their resistance, sometimes again at the point of the bayonet. Frémicourt seems to have been taken and the British to have driven on eastward. North of here, Vaulx-Vraucourt, which contained a large enemy garrison that offered the strongest resistance with machine guns, apparently has fallen in its entirety to the British. Ecoust-St. Mein and Longatte, a suburb, are again reported to have been captured by the British.

Germans Slaughtered in a Trap.

Here the Germans delivered a powerful counterattack and the British withdrew in the face of it. The artillery was turned on the trap the Germans had made for themselves, and after it had finished the British moved back again and mopped up what remained of the Germans.

Bullecourt is well in British hands, as apparently also is Hendecourt. Riencourt and Cagnicourt seem to be in the possession of Field Marshal Haig's men. Heavy fighting is reported in this locality, as here the British have reached a point only a few hundred yards from the Drocourt-Quéant "switch line," which apparently is garrisoned with every man the German high command has been able to lay hands on. They are waiting for what they expect may come in their five lines of trenches, which are protected by many belts of barbed wire.

But even as they wait they are being harassed by heavy fire from the British cannon, which throughout this zone of the battle are thundering away as hard as their gunners can force them.

From here northward across the Arras-Cambrai road and along the River Scarpe the British are pushing forward, gaining more ground, straightening their line, and drawing generally closer to the Drocourt-Quéant defenses of the enemy.

Pay Tribute to British Skill.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Aug. 30.—In the capture of Combles the British took a battery complete, in addition to some 260 prisoners, and at Maurepas one fifteen-centimeter howitzer and four field guns fell into their hands, according to information received here.

A German staff memorandum which has just been captured says: "The enemy is a past master at cloaking his intentions." Another document which has fallen into possession of the British says: "The troops opposite are Australians, a powerful type of man, exceedingly clever, versatile, and very enterprising. They know how to creep through the high crops and capture our outposts. A characteristic is that the enemy takes few prisoners, but bayonets and shoots everybody. The enemy also understands exceedingly well how to plan, prepare, and carry out large patrol operations. The hostile infantry shows great dash by daylight."

Splendid Work of Haig's Gunners.

It is time something was said of the wonderful work in the Scarpe-Somme battle of the British artillery, which made possible the victories gained. The Germans themselves testify to the terrible efficiency of the massed British cannon, which in many cases stood virtually wheel to wheel while pouring death and destruction into the enemy, knocking the will to fight out of him and blasting a path for the infantry.

The prisoners all mention the terrific barrages they have withstood and comment bitterly upon the thinness of their own counterbarrages, because the German heavies are always being dragged rearward, to save them from capture. The German artillery apparently had little faith in the ability of the infantry to hold off the British attacks today.

As for days past, the British barrages have fallen all along the front, ever moving forward, and they have come down on masses of the enemy lying in whatever shelter they could find, such as shell craters, old and new, and old fallen-in trenches, which cross and recross this ground, made barren even of grass by years of war. Rarely have the Germans had the protection of dugouts. Even when they have, going into them often meant capture, for the British infantry and tanks at nearly all times have been upon them so closely after the barrages lifted that they have not had much time to offer fight, even if they really desired to.

The casualties inflicted by the British shells have been larger, perhaps, than ever before, because the gunners, advancing closely behind the infantry, have had many opportunities on this terrain, which alternately is slightly rolling and flat, to lay on their weapons with open sights and pour a rapid fire of steel into the Germans. The artillery has materially helped to increase the number of prisoners by throwing completely out of gear all the enemy rationing arrangements. The emptier a German stomach the more docile is its owner. Still more has the artillery helped to catch prisoners by dropping barrages behind large groups, cutting off their retreat. And all this fire has had its effect in even more ways.

The extent to which the Australian corps' prisoner cages have been packed of late refutes the charge of bayoneting and shooting. The same document comments on the fact that "the enemy airmen are absolutely masters of the air here, and are far more numerous than ours."

That patriotism is not altogether so intense in the German Army seems to be suggested by notes in the captured staff memorandum which tell of the action of the 5th Company of the 22d Infantry Regiment refusing to relieve the 4th Company on the ground that they had done their tour of duty in the trenches. The battalion commander, after threatening to send them forward under escort, appealed to their sense of duty to the Fatherland. The notes go on to say that several men were heard to exclaim, "To hell with the Fatherland!"

Official Reports of the Day's Operations

French

PARIS, Aug. 30.

Night Report—During the day we ejected from the east bank of the Canal du Nord enemy elements that were still resisting. Cantigny and Sermaize are ours.

Pursuing our progress, our troops have crossed the canal at two points, in front of Cantigny and Beaurains, and taken Chevilly and Hill 89 and penetrated Genvry.

More to the south stubborn fighting has been going on in the region north and east of Noyon. We hold Happlincourt and Mont St. Siméon. During these actions we have taken several hundred prisoners.

Between the Oise and the Aisne there has been no less lively fighting.

On the north bank of the Ailette we have conquered the village of Champs.

North of Soissons we have taken Chavigny and Cuffies and advanced our line to the western outskirts of Crouy.

Aviation—Our bombarding machines have attacked the Pinon Forest and the railroad station at Anizy-le-Château, (both between Soissons and Laon,) and crossings of the Ailette located in this region. More than forty-eight tons of explosives were dropped.

Twenty enemy machines have been downed or sent down out of control. An enemy captive balloon was set on fire.

Day Report—Along the Somme and in the region of the Canal du Nord there was no change during the night.

Between the Ailette and the Aisne French troops repulsed several German counterattacks. East of Pasly we maintained our gains.

Along the Vesle and in Champagne German raids were without result. The night was quiet on the remainder of the front.

British

LONDON, Aug. 30.

Night Report—East and northeast of Bapaume our operations are proceeding satisfactorily, in spite of increased hostile resistance. Hard fighting occurred on the greater part of this front, and a number of heavy counterattacks were made by the enemy.

Our troops entered Riencourt-les-Bapaume and Bancourt, where they have been actively engaged with the enemy throughout the day. They captured Frémicourt and Vaulxvroucourt, taking a number of prisoners, and have reached the western outskirts of Beugny.

At Ecoust-St. Mien the enemy is still maintaining an obstinate defense, closely pressed by our troops, who have taken a number of prisoners in this locality.

At Bullecourt and Hendecourt hostile counterattacks, delivered with much determination by strong forces, compelled our troops to fall back to the western outskirts of these villages and to a German trench system between them, where the enemy's attacks were stopped by our fire. North of these villages an attack launched this morning by Canadian troops astride the Arras-Cambrai road has been successful.

The enemy defenses between Hendecourt and Haucourt have been captured, together with the latter village and several hundred prisoners. South of Bapaume our troops have maintained vigorous pressure upon the enemy and have gained ground.

We have made progress east and northeast of Cléry, and in this sector have taken 300 prisoners.

In the Lys sector the enemy is continuing his withdrawal, closely followed by our troops. The town of Bailleul is again in our possession.

Day Report—In spite of the destruction of river bridges, our advancing troops crossed the Somme both south and west of Péronne.

We have taken Cléry-sur-Somme and Combles. In this area alone we took over 200 prisoners and a few guns yesterday.

London and West Lancashire troops made important progress yesterday afternoon east of the Sensée River, capturing Bullecourt and Hendecourt-les-Cagnicourt after hard fighting, together with the powerful German trench systems protecting these villages.

Between Hendecourt and the Arras-Cambrai road an attack delivered by Canadian troops early this morning is reported to be developing favorably.

Astride the River Scarpe English and Scottish troops continued their advance yesterday and gained valuable ground in the direction of Eterpigny, Hamblain-les-Prés, and Plouvain. The village of Remy is held by us.

A number of prisoners was captured in these operations.

In the valleys or the Lawe and Lys Rivers we continued to push forward.

German

BERLIN, Aug. 30, (via London.)

Night Report—Great British attacks on a wide front southeast of Arras failed.

There were local engagements northeast of Noyon and on the Ailette.

Day Report—Southeast of Arras the enemy's infantry and tanks advancing on the battlefield were taken under the effective fire of our artillery and battleplanes. Toward noon the enemy resumed his attack. Their centre of gravity yesterday was south of the Arras-Cambrai Road.

In severe fighting we beat back the enemy, who launched several assaults from Chérisy and Fontaine against Hendecourt. Further south the British penetrated Bullecourt and Riencourt. Bitter fighting raged here in the trench system and crater fields of former battles.

Riencourt has been wrested again from the enemy, and the eastern part of Bullecourt recaptured.

At noon the enemy extended his attacks as far as northeast of Bapaume. For the most part, they broke down under our fire. Five times he attacked in vain from St. Leger and Mory. A great number of tanks were destroyed.

North of the Somme, in connection with movements carried out south of the river, we shifted our defense to the line running east of Bapaume and to the northwest of Péronne yesterday. The enemy followed hesitatingly, advancing beyond Bapaume, Combles, and Maurepas.

Between Péronne and the Oise there have been infantry engagements, and also between the west bank of the Somme and the canal. Strong attacks which the enemy launched southeast of Nesle and from Noyon against our new lines northeast of the town were repulsed.

On the Ailette the French obtained a footing on the east bank of the stream west of Folembray, but only to a slight depth.

Between the Ailette and the Aisne the French and Americans resumed their attacks. Between Pont-St. Mard and Chavigny they stormed our lines from early morning. Tanks constantly advanced in front of dense attacking waves of infantry.

East German, Magdeburg, Hanoverian, Thuringian, and Guard regiments completely frustrated the attacks of the enemy carried out with double superiority in forces.

Seventy-two tanks were shot to pieces.

The French suffered a severe defeat here yesterday. Their losses were unusually high. We captured prisoners from ten different divisions.

AMERICANS KEEP UP HEAVY FIRE AT JUVIGNY

Hurl Thousands of High Explosive Shells Into German Positions There.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 30, (Associated Press.)—While the French troops on the right and left of the Americans on the front north of Soissons struggled forward today, the Americans sent thousands of rounds of high explosive shells and shrapnell into the German positions. They made little effort to advance their line.

Late this afternoon some progress was made by the Americans in the region of Juvigny.

Although the day was not marked by any spectacular advance, there was far from a lull in the activities on the American front.

Since the Americans appeared on Wednesday the Germans have displayed stubbornness and skill. They have good positions, and are defending them in a manner which would suggest that they might even attempt a serious counterattack. The positions of the Americans are perhaps not so good, and the contest seems to have narrowed down to one of comparative merits of officers and men of the two organizations.

Before the day was over the Germans had begun to show signs of weakening, and observers reported troop movements which appeared to indicate a regrouping, and perhaps a retirement.

The orders to the Americans were to maintain a harassing fire through the day, and even the minor attack of one flank was decided upon only after the advance made by the French indicated its advisability.

Over the field the American infantry remained in the positions they had held last night. Dug in behind almost every little rise on the plateau and on the hillside, they awaited the order to attack. Closer to the German positions scores of shell holes sheltered the men from the sweeping machine gun fire, while further to the rear there were companies waiting to be called to their support.

The artillery went into the action early in the morning, not in barrage, but firing first at one point in the German lines and then at another, in accordance with reports indicating places where the Germans were mobilizing or where there might be danger of a concentration. Rarely, if ever, have the American troops delivered over such a period so continuous a fire. It was of a punishing character that must have wrought terrible destruction, and probably much demoralization. The lines are close together, and great shells from the howitzers were mixed with those of the lighter character, while the big long range American guns sent shells far in the rear of the enemy lines to places indicated by observers in the aerial service.

The American infantry between the lines was forced to become a part of the action today by the determined Germans, whose long line of machine gun emplacements was supplemented by groups of infantry who fired at every appearance of the Americans. It was a day of sniping for them, especially the machine gunners. Their fire did not rise in most cases ten inches above the ground. One gunner had the trick of holding the trigger until just three shots were fired. All day long his gun gave forth its "tat, tat, tat," every burst being followed by a slight change in direction.

A large part of those caught in the ground sweeping fire were wounded in the leg below the knees.

The Germans in front of the Americans at times were subjected not only to the fire of the American guns, but to a supplemental raking from the French. It was impossible to ascertain the German casualties, but it is certain that they were heavy.

The big gun fire reached the maximum of intensity. The roar of the artillery rose in a great crescendo. The Americans used no gas shells. The Germans did, however, but in slightly smaller quantities than usual.

One prisoner captured by the Americans brought the news that Captain Karl Boy-Ed, former Naval Attaché at Washington, who recently resigned as head of the press section of the German Naval Department, had published a book in Germany dealing with the reasons why the United States entered the war. Other prisoners confirmed the reports of heavy German casualties as the result of the terrible artillery fire of the Americans.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE VESLE FRONT, Aug. 30, (Associated Press.)—American patrols are active each night keeping in contact with the enemy along the Vesle. The American officers continue to believe that the Germans will soon be compelled to withdraw, at least as far as the Aisne, owing to the constant pressure on the French and British fronts. The Americans are determined to be stepping on the heels of the Germans when they begin their retreat; which, the officers say "is coming sooner or later."

There was the usual artillery activity today.

PARIS, Aug. 30.—The Arbeiter Zeitung of Vienna is quoted here as giving the following peace advice to Germany on Aug. 27:

"The Reichstag should be convened immediately and a Socialist made a Minister of the empire. The Prussian Landtag should be dissolved. The Reichstag should declare in favor of revising the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest and renounce all territorial annexation.

"Furthermore, the Reichstag should declare for the restoration of Belgium and announce the readiness of Germany to enter a league of nations committed to disarmament on sea and land."

MAURICE ANALYZES SHIFT IN TIDE OF WAR

British Expert Says Element of Surprise Turned the Scale in Favor of Allies.

HAS NO DOUBT OF RESULT

But Declares Haig's Army Must Be Kept Up and Ships Provided for America.

By MAJOR GEN. SIR F. B. MAURICE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—This year has been the most dramatic in the war in its sudden changes of fortune. We have seen the enemy overrunning with almost incredible rapidity the most elaborate defenses. We have seen that great rivers have not checked his progress. We have seen him advancing thirty miles into our lines in less time than we had taken to advance five or six. We have seen him within an ace of overwhelming success.

Within little more than a month we have seen the enemey's great scheme of conquest shattered. We find him yielding on a great part of his front, and we are recovering ground at a rate and at a price which even the wildest optimist had not conceived to be possible. We have been accustomed to battles on a front of thirty or forty miles, for which months of elaborate preparation were necessary; and we now see the Allies on the move on a front of 175 miles from Flanders to Rheims. A blow is struck, now here, now there, suddenly and unexpectedly; and always with success.

There has, in fact, been a general speeding up. A month ago we were back in 1914. Today we jumped forward two years, with the excellent prospect of finding ourselves before long as regards ground where we were at the beginning of 1918, but with the vast difference that we have before us a weakening enemy, while we still grow in power. We are finding an antidote to wire and trenches.

From the early days of 1915 onward our statesmen were skeptical of the possibility of defeating Germany in the west and were always looking for the way round. The soldier, realizing the potentialities of the enemy's central position, was equally skeptical of the way round. He saw that the enemy would always get there first, and maintained stoutly that the western front must always be the decisive front. He was equally firm in his conviction that he could get through the barrier. The statesmen asked for results; and the soldier, trying again and again, failed to produce them. He knew he was right, but he couldn't prove he was right; and thence came the interminable discussions between easterner and westerner.

Paved Way with Artillery.

The problem of attacking continuous lines of trenches was new and could only be solved by experiment, while the experiments could only be carried out at a ghastly price. Early in 1915 Joffre started the process of nibbling at the enemy's lines. That proved too slow. The enemy had time to bring up his reserves; and as a means of attrition it failed, because the attack lost as heavily as the defense. Then came our experiment, on a small scale, at Neuve Chapelle, of assault following intense bombardment, an experiment which Joffre elaborated into his great attack in the Champagne in the Autumn of 1915. Trusting always in the ever-increasing number of their guns and growing piles of shells, the Allies repeated this method, with variations, for two years, but always failed to break through. The great assault by infantry was changed into attack, with limited objectives; but always there was a prelude of prolonged and intense bombardment, and, though the degree of success attained varied, the final result was always the same.

The great and lengthy preparations for these battles could not be concealed. The enemy knew where the blow was to fall and had his reserves ready beyond range of our artillery. His admirable system of communication between the eastern and western fronts allowed him, when hard pressed by us, to bring over sufficient fresh corps to bring us to a stand.

In the Autumn of last year we tried another experiment, and at Cambrai succeeded in reintroducing surprise as a weapon of the offensive. But, exhausted by prolonged fighting in Flanders and weakened by the dispatch of troops to Italy, we could not develop our initial success. None the less, that battle marks the turning point in the war. Ludendorff learned from it, and we have learned from it; and surprise has been the feature of the battles of 1918.

It would obviously be wrong to discuss the methods by which surprise has been or can be obtained. Some of them are well known, some of them are not. The broad fact is that surprise, in one form or another, proved to be the means of surmounting the difficulties of trench warfare and of gaining rapid results.

Victory Now Certain.

The possibility of obtaining surprise has made a decisive victory in the west not only possible but certain. We can see now that our stupendous efforts of the last four years have not been thrown away. The enemy is being slowly and steadily exhausted. During the three years in which we have been attacking him we have been wearing him out; and he has, as I explained in my second article, done much this year, by his methods of attack, toward completing the process.

There was at one time a very real danger that we should not be able to stay the course, that we should exhaust ourselves in trying to exhaust him. Now that America is with us, that danger is past. We must increase in power, while he goes down; and therefore the process that is now going on is similar in effect to the transfer of votes in Parliament. Every soldier whom the Allies put into France counts two on a division.

Now that we have unity of command, we can and do make our superiority felt at the right time and in the right place. That superiority is not yet great. It will be very much greater, and not in numbers alone. Our methods are improving; the number and power of our guns are still increasing; our tanks are developing by leaps and bounds; and in the air our mastery is becoming daily more apparent. I was in France during a week of perfect flying weather and of full moon. As compared with April, the amount of bombing which the enemy did behind our lines was insignificant and his attacks by low-flying planes were much less frequent. We are not yet able to prevent him from carrying out either form of air attack, but the damage which we do to him is out of all proportion greater than he does to us.

I have come back to England with the impression that in every department of the war we are now definitely superior to the enemy. Our superiority is not yet sufficient to be overwhelming, but it is certain to be so. The only question is when it will be so, and the answer depends largely upon us.

Germans Throw Away Chances.

The Germans have proved themselves to be admirable planners when they have plenty of time to think. Their first plan of attack in the west, in 1914, was a military masterpiece. The plan which they found during the Winter of 1916-17, in order to avoid our attacks and gain time to finish off Russia, was excellent. Their plan of attack worked out during the Winter of 1917-18 was as good.

Mercifully, their Generals have again and again shown that they are not capable of dealing with the daily changes and chances of war, and they have thrown away opportunity after opportunity. The fact remains, however, that the principles of Ludendorff's 1918 plan were sound. He learned from Cambrai the effect of surprise in trench warfare, and he saw that we failed because we had no weight behind our blow. He had plenty of weight behind his, and that is why he got his results so quickly. Tanks, airplanes, weight of artillery, and other thousand and one devices of modern war are all of value, some of them of increasing and inestimable value; but nothing has yet replaced in war the big battalions.

Our present offensive, great as its promise is, has not the weight to carry us through to complete victory. The length of the war now depends mainly on when we shall have that weight. America has plumped for the west, and is sending troops over as fast as she can get ships from us and from her own resources. She cannot do more than that. France is, and has long been, making the greatest effort of which she is capable.

The question is, are we doing the same? We Allies are certain of having the necessary weight as the American Armies develop, but that is a matter of time. No one would willingly prolong the war for a day if he could shorten it by any possible sacrifice.

It is no time to consider what we have done. We must ask ourselves what more we can do. We still are living from hand to mouth as regards man power, and the question is still anxiously asked in France: "Will they keep up the drafts?"

Must Have More Men.

If we rely only on our annual contingent of 19-year-old boys and on our recovered sick and wounded we cannot maintain our forces in the field at the full strength. The day on which we shall have the necessary weight will be postponed, and the war will be prolonged. As long as Ireland is out of the war, and as long as labor difficulties stand in the way of the fullest possible development of our man power, we cannot honestly say we have done our best. If we, as a nation, can be made to realize that full and complete victory is certain, that every able-bodied man sent to France brings the end nearer, that upon us depends the saving of life and treasure by shortening the war, shall we not make the supreme effort to overcome all difficulties and keep our ranks full?

Ireland will be lost for all time if she prolongs the war by refusing her help. We require during this Autumn and Winter to devote our whole energies to increasing our power in France. Our overseas expeditions must be reduced to what is strictly necessary for the defense of vital centres. For, apart from such reinforcement as they may yield for the Russian front, every ship which they require supplies Americans in France. All our naval and military establishments must be reviewed with the object of getting men for the fighting line. We must overcome every obstacle which keeps young and active men in places which might be taken by the middle-aged.

We must appeal to the dominions to look into their man power in the same way. If Australia could see at work her glorious troops who saved Amiens in April last and are now, with reduced ranks, driving the enemy back along the Somme, their ranks would not long remain unfilled.

The difficulties of introducing compulsory service in the middle of the war have made our recruiting methods very slow. Therefore we must begin in time. Men must be ready before and not after the battle has begun.

Complete victory in the west is certain. How soon it can be obtained depends on what more we can do to keep America supplied with ships and Sir Douglas Haig with men.

long have been under the harrow of the Hun invasion.

With three months' battle experience of their own to guide the Americans, the French and English recognize that the best results henceforth will be obtainable by thorough Americanization. Their own training, their own supplies, and their own front would conduce to the greatest measure of success. The period of so-called brigading with European troops has now passed and the time has come to turn the Americans loose on their own sectors in divisions, corps, and armies.

The French say that nothing was ever more to the purpose than the Americans' appearance on the scene, full of energy and with methods strange to the Germans, such as long-range rifle shooting and the use of cover in Indian fashion. What they have accomplished does not exhaust, but only illustrates, their native capacities, and as all-American instruction becomes more and more established, our army will show that versatility and inventiveness which supply the element of surprise so priceless in this war.

Frenchmen and Englishmen with whom I have talked paid a tribute to the work of our staff college and training methods, and all are prompt in their generous recognition of the working out of Pershing's plans. The views thus set forth are highly important, as American predominance in respect to numbers will become emphasized with the next few months.

New War Methods Favored.

It is fortunate that the Americans, at so early a date, have made a record which entitles them to the confidence of their allies and insures freedom of policy and action to our military leadership. Instead of having to argue for our own methods, European authorities will second us in striking out on bold and original lines.

A French officer, discussing the Americans, said:

"I have been much interested in studying the Americans, and from previous accounts expected an entirely different type of man. I have been agreeably surprised at their modesty. They have great exuberance and a lot of imagination, but what many called boastfulness seems to me to be an entirely different quality.

"They project their vision and sometimes, perhaps, take too much into the picture. But when responsibility comes down hard on them they are as steady as a rock. I have seen no troops more hardheaded and generally reliable.

"I heard of an officer who took part in a very gallant action at the front. Subsequently he was in a company with Europeans who showered him with compliments on how the Americans had behaved. He took it all quietly, and when they got through remarked: 'I hope we are doing all right.'"

CONCESSIONS TO RUSSIA BY KAISER

Routes of Commerce and Free Ports in "Independent" Baltic Provinces.

CAUCASUS CLAIMS DROPPED

But Germany Is to Get Oil and Independence of Georgia Is Recognized.

INDEMNITY PARTLY SHIFTED

Ukraine and Finland Jointly to Pay 1,000,000,000 of Total of 6,000,000,000 Marks.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 30.—The North German Gazette explains the import of the three supplementary agreements to the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty signed in Berlin Tuesday. It says the agreements are intended to regulate a number of political and military-political questions arising from the fact that Russia's relations with the border States are still unsettled.

"The German Government felt itself at one with the German people in the principle of not causing or supporting the forcible disunion of former Russian territory," says the Gazette. "This principle, which is expressly laid down in the supplementary agreements, makes it possible for Russia in the future to order its own internal affairs, and forms the foundation on which any Russian Government which does not desire war with Germany can and must build.

"Esthonia and Livonia stand in the foreground of German interest. The supplementary agreements contain a solution which assures the Baltic States independence, but gives Russia routes of commerce to and free ports on the Baltic for all time.

"Germany succeeded in getting Russia's consent to recognition of the independence of Georgia, but it was impossible to secure Russia's consent to acknowledge other States in the Caucasus. The Russian Government laid the greatest weight on assuring to itself the Baku territory with its rich naphtha fields. Germany could not disregard this wish in view of the fact that Russia pledged itself to place a portion of the naphtha production at the disposal of Germany and its allies.

"The 6,000,000,000 marks which Russia undertake to pay Germany includes all sums lost by Germans up to July 1, 1917, through Russian revolutionary confiscatory legislation. A financial commission will be named to regulate the matter of mutual bank deposits. No further expropriations shall be made of German property, and Germans affected by such measures shall be indemnified, but expropriations in Russia will be recognized as legal if they affect all Russians and foreigners alike.

"Russia's new laws regarding inheritances shall not apply to Germans whose rights shall be determined in accordance with the Russo-German Convention of 1894. All civil issues between Russians and Germans antedating the war shall be adjudicated by two courts, each composed of a Dane as President, and one German and one Russian jurist, with seats at Berlin and Moscow."

The newspaper adds that of the 6,000,000,000 marks Russia has agreed to pay, Ukraine and Finland jointly will pay 1,000,000,000.

GERMAN MUTINEERS JOIN UKRAINE REBELS

1,200 Take Several Guns with Them and Wage Battle with German Force.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Twelve hundred German mutineers have joined forces with an armed peasant body and attacked the German forces in the region of Dymera, twenty-four miles from Kiev, according to a Russian wireless dispatch received here today from Moscow. The dispatch reads:

"A resolute struggle is going on against the White Guards. The organizer of the recently discovered conspiracy at Moscow, named Marpulias, has been shot. Near the Church of Christ the Savior a band of White Guards was captured during the night. The author Peschechnoff, (formerly editor of a newspaper at Petrograd,) has been set free at Moscow.

"In the Ukraine the unrest among the peasants is spreading. The district and town of Dymera, twenty-four miles from Kiev, has been declared by the German Army commander to be in a state of siege. All persons were forbidden to be in the streets after 7 P. M. and all movements to and from the town were prohibited.

"Nevertheless, the peasants succeeded in concentrating forces around the town and the commander asked for reinforcements from Kiev. After two hours an airplane appeared over the town and announced that two steamers with soldiers and guns had been dispatched against the peasant forces.

"Soldiers arrived with machine guns and occupied all routes to the town. A fine was imposed on the town.

"Mutineers numbering about 1,200 men, with ten machine guns and several other guns, joined the peasants and fierce fighting took place between these forces and the Germans. There were many losses on both sides.

"The population of Kiev is starving."

REDS FLEE FROM USSURI.

Lose 400 Men in Three-Day Battle with Allied Forces.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 31.—The Daily Mail's Harbin, Manchuria, correspondent, telegraphing Thursday regarding the situation in Siberia, says the Bolshevist forces were defeated in a three days' battle along the Ussuri River, losing 400 men killed.

The correspondent adds that the Bolshevist troops are fleeing toward Khaboravsk, and that the Japanese have occupied Iman, midway between Nikol and Khaboravsk.

RED LEADERS TAKE HEART.

German Writer Says They Feel More Secure Than Formerly.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 30.—The Bolshevist authorities in Russia appear to regard their position as more secure than formerly, according to Hans Vorst, probably Germany's best informed writer on Russian affairs, in the course of a review of the situation printed in the Tageblatt of Berlin.

Writing from Moscow on Aug. 20, Vorst says that the main reasons for the change in the attitude of the authorities are the recent victories over the Czechoslovaks, the feeling that Entente intervention in Russia is less formidable than was at first feared, and the recent German defeats, which have given rise to a feeling that there was nothing to fear from Germany.

Vorst's articles, which have been printed during the last few months, have been marked throughout by a desire to tell the truth, even when it has been unpalatable. For this reason, what he has to say about the changed attitude in Russia is of interest.

He says that the registration of former Russian officers which has just ended has also contributed to the increase of Bolshevist confidence. There had been all sorts of rumors in circulation about a secret anti-Soviet organization among these officers, and the Government leaders were plainly perturbed by the appearance in Moscow on Aug. 7 of 15,000 officers for registration. It amazed the Bolshevist leaders, but it was demonstrated that their fears were exaggerated. They were not prepared to deal with such a great number, and all but 180 were permitted to return to their homes.

Vorst also calls attention to the fact that an article appearing in the Pravda on Aug. 17 from the pen of a Bolshevist leader employed a tone never before used from this source in an appeal to the bourgeoisie to make common cause with the laborers.

Vorst, in concluding his article, says: "It cannot be mistaken that a quieter and more confident feeling prevails in the Soviet Government, and in connection with this feeling the inclination to intensified terrorism is diminished."

RUSSIANS RECOVER PORT.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 30.—A Russian volunteer army has captured the Black Sea port of Novorossysk, according to a dispatch from Kiev.

Nishni-Novgorod has been chosen as a temporary headquarters by the Military Revolutionary Committee, the town being cleared of counter-revolutionary elements, according to a Moscow telegram to the North German Gazette. Eleven of the counter-revolutionaries have been executed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The Russian volunteer army, reported to have captured the Black Sea port of Novorossysk, is believed here to be remnants of Russian regular organizations who scattered to their homes after the peace of Brest-Litovsk. They have been joined by peasants and are understood to be acting as far as possible in co-operation with the anti-Bolshevist forces.

CONSULS OUT OF MOSCOW?

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 30.—The Japanese Consul General and the Embassy staff, the last Entente representatives at Moscow, have left for home under a special safe-conduct provided by the Bolshevist Government, according to a Moscow dispatch to the Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—So far as the State Department here knows American Consul General Poole still is in Moscow, and no official report has been received to confirm dispatches from German sources that the last of the Entente representatives have left that city.

The Times Special Cable Dispatches from the Battlefronts

BRITISH KEEN IN PURSUIT

By PHILIP GIBBS.

white mist over all the war zone until it was soaked up by the rising sun. The battlefields appeared ghastly in this whitish glamour, with dew clinging to the strands of barbed wire and to all the tall thistles growing rankly in the unreaped cornfields, all cut up with trenches and shell craters.

Supply trains puffed through the desolation of those old battlefields with long trails of white smoke and truckloads of shells for the new battles. Kite balloons rose above the gray earth and wagged their white ears aloft.

Presently along the roads the transport came crawling. Labor battalions came out of their camps in which smoky fires burned and marched up to mend roads tramped over by German boots a day or two ago. From the aerodromes on the way the British flying men were coming out for the first flight of the morning and winged away into the dappled sky.

So the world out here awoke to another day of war, though further off there was no waking, for man slept.

I went up through Miraumont and the valley of the Ancre, across which the Welsh went wading to capture the heights of Thiepval on Aug. 28. It was a valley of abomination, and the dawn lightened its trees, sticking out of deep swamps, from which there rose wafts of stench, where dead things lie rotting. Sandbag emplacements, where men had little shelter from storms of fire, were white against the charred earth, and black stumps were everywhere for miles up this valley to Irles and Achiet-le-Petit and Grevillers and other places near Bapaume where the British had been fighting hard these last few days.

Litter of German Debris.

All this tumult of the tortured earth, all these pits dug by shells, all this wild destruction of places ruined in the first year of the war and mangled ever since were strewn with relics of German life and German death, newly littered here. Their great steel helmets punctured by bullets or torn like paper by shell splinters lay in thousands, with gas masks and rifles and cartridge belts and gray coats.

Along every mile of the way lay rows of stick bombs, never used against the British, and dumps of unexploded shells, hideous in their potentiality. A few dead horses lay on each side of the tracks, as they had gone trudging up with the British transport before being shot. Beside one horse lay a dead white dog, the pet of the transport column.

For a picture of war an artist like Orpen should have been here, but the men hereabout had other work to do. They were getting on with the business of bringing up guns across the wild wastes of cratered ground, filling up pits in the roads for the transport to pass, tearing up broken rails that new ones might be laid, riding and marching forward to support their comrades in another day of fighting.

Heroism of New Zealanders.

They were mostly New Zealanders on this way, and although bad stuff was flying about—the enemy was crumping Grevillers and Achiet le Petit and scattering "high velocities" about in a vicious random way—many of these lads did not trouble themselves to wear steel helmets but kept to their slouch hats with the dandy red band.

I poked my head into a tent to get some direction and found a New Zealand officer just waking up from a too brief sleep. "How are things going?" I asked, and he said: "Oh, fine! Our boys have done greatly and are still going ahead."

He sat up to tell me some of their adventures, how they fought machine gun nests, how the Germans counterattacked a day or two ago and got very near to their field batteries, which were far forward.

"What do you think?" he said. "Those gunners of ours fought at point blank range until the Germans were nearly up to their muzzles and took seven prisoners of their own, which is not in the artillery contract. They are devilish amused with themselves and have reason to be."

So I went on to Bapaume with quickened pulse over trenches taken only yesterday and still bristling with parts of German machine guns, which were densely emplaced along the line. The New Zealanders were organizing their own defenses in the old German trenches, oiling their rifles. They pointed out the best way into Bapaume. Through belts of wire I went on across the railway, which I crossed first in March, 1917, on another day of victory.

Bapaume is not much different today from when I last saw it before the German avalanche a few months ago. Since then the British guns have pounded it, flying men have gone over it at night dropping down tons of explosives, and now this morning the enemy is shelling it again, but what difference can there be in a place already a ruined scrap heap of broken houses, except more holes in the walls, broken roofs broken, brickwork smashed into smaller dust?

German Fear of Airmen.

I prowled about the streets of Bapaume, through the gaping walls of houses, over piled wreckage, and found it the same old Bapaume as when I left it, except that some of the British huts and the officers' clubhouse and some Y. M. C. A. tents and shelters had been blown to bits like everything else. This was the chief difference, except again for many signboards showing the recent occupation by the enemy.

One notice caught my eye, and I saw the same message of warning as in reference to Grevillers and Achiet and other places near Bapaume, showing how effective had been the work of the British airmen in striking terror to the German soldier. It said, "Weg vor der Strasse; hier finden euch feindliche," ("Keep off the street here; hostile airmen will find you.") These notices were even in the open country down the battlefield tracks, telling how the British airmen had swooped over them all with their constant menace.

Prowling about these sinister streets of Bapaume I met a fellow in a steel hat who had a valuable box of matches, which was good for two cigarettes, and in a friendly conversation he told me that before he became a rifleman of the New Zealanders he was the editor of a newspaper in his country and fond of literature. We exchanged views on the war and life and shellfire and ruins, and he told me how some days ago, when he was outside Puisieux with his platoon, they had been badly troubled by German machine guns in front of them. The editor was one of six men who went out to get rid of this trouble, if they had luck, and they not only brought in a machine gun but twenty-six prisoners as well, being the first batch from Puisieux. It was another little experience for a man who was more ready with a fountain pen than a rifle before the world went to war.

In the streets of Bapaume I picked up a book dropped in a hurry by some poor devil, who will never read it. It was entitled: "Der Kraft, der Strom des Friedens, das Meer der Gnade," (Power the source of peace, the fount of grace, and I think when I have time I shall read it to find out the angle of German philosophy with regard to the war. It ought to make good reading, though not perhaps as the author intended.

At 8:30 o'clock this morning another action began outside Bapaume, and for half an hour or more the British drumfire was very fierce and heavy. I was amazed to find the guns so far forward, heavy guns as well as field guns, but all through the recent fighting the New Zealand gunners have been like greyhounds on the scent and have followed their infantry with amazing speed and skill.

The heavies were firing in a wide arc around Bapaume, and their shells came through the air with a ripping sound that almost lifted my hair through my steel helmet. Shell after shell of large calibre screamed overhead, and some of them had a gobbling noise as they spun at lightning speed.

The bellowing guns seemed to shake these old battlefields and stir their troubled earth. Field batteries within short range of the enemy were knocking like postmen in the London streets with double rattats as children might dream of them at night.

The New Zealanders and English troops were attacking Fremicourt and the high ridge northeast of Bapaume overlooking Beugny, while Riencourt was being approached by other English troops, and further south the British were working toward Beaulencourt. Success in these attacks would give the strongest defensive lines around Bapaume, and put the enemy in a perilous position.

Anzacs Lead the Chase.

The New Zealanders have never been still since I went among them one month ago in Hebuterne and Rossignol Wood, when even then they were harrying the enemy out of his lines. Since then, after Aug. 8, they advanced thirteen miles, and always, as one of their officers told me today, have been leading the hounds in the pack on the way to Bapaume.

At the beginning of the British advance they attacked Puisieux, joined up on the right with English troops in the valley of the Ancre and helped to take Beauregard Dovecote, an important spot which the enemy defended desperately, so that there was hard fighting there. Three of the forward observing officers of the New Zealanders, very gallant fellows, took twenty-three prisoners unaided. About 300 German birds were hauled out of the Dovecote by their men.

They then joined with the English in a big attack on Bucquoy, Irles, and Achiet le Grand, and afterward captured Loupart Wood, which I saw this morning, as many times in the old days, with its thin fringe of branchless trees staring away for miles over the Somme battlefields, on the left side of the Albert-Bapaume road.

Grevillers fell to them—Grevillers with its ruined church through which the sunlight streamed today and into which German shells came crashing, and then with English troops fighting most splendidly on their right they flung a loop round Bapaume by the suburb of Favreuil. The taking of Beugnatre, "Bug Natture," as the Tommies call it, by English troops sealed the fate of Bapaume, and when the New Zealanders and their English comrades swung down northeast of the town almost to the railway the enemy saw that his game was up in this part of the world and decided to quit.

The New Zealand boys had no need to take it by storm. They entered fighting through machine posts outside and took possession of its streets, having only three casualties in the town itself. That was yesterday, and today Bapaume is safely British, with the troops dribbling away over the heights beyond.

British Casualties Fewer.

Not many casualties come back from this new battle. I saw some lightly wounded men here and there in advance dressing stations, fixed up in old ruined farmsteads behind the present lines, where the Red Cross flag is floating over the broken walls or is thrust in the rafters of tileless roofs—little pictures of war which remain in one's heart as stretchers are carried in and strong fellows help in their limping comrades as tenderly as women, while round about big shells are bursting from long-range guns.

In all these places there are German wounded, and down the tracks from Bapaume came many German prisoners captured a few hours ago in a new battle on the heights outside. They seemed to me a most wretched looking lot of men, and I saw some hundreds of men newly caught. They had a dazed, senseless look, and were drooping and downcast like beaten animals. They were the worst looking set of Germans I had seen in recent days, and no wonder, for they must have had a dreadful and terrifying time, without rest from pursuit, and had been driven into the fight relentlessly by officers behind the lines.

The roses on my table plucked in Bapaume are a sweeter sight than things that lie about the battlefields, but the sweetness of life to the British soldiers is that their courage and sacrifice have not been in vain. Today, as on many recent days, they are reaping the fruits of victory from one end of the line to the other, and the whole British Army is moving forward with a great vision in front of it—the vision of the last victory which will end all this fighting.

I hear that up in the north the enemy is drawing back near the Lys, and it is possible that British patrols are in Bailleul.

GERMANS RENEWING ATTACKS IN WAVES

Forced to Give Battle by the Strategic Pressure of Debeney and Humbert.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Aug. 29.—There was very heavy fighting today on the French battlefront. It was clear yesterday that the British progress, which will soon bring under fire the communications from the German southern positions, had led Ludendorff to decide on a retirement to the line of the Somme-Crozat Canal and the western fringe of the Coucy forest.

It was thus a question of evacuating the pocket tactically similar to the retreat from the Marne salient, but the geographical conditions are very different. Here the west side of the pocket is comparatively lacking in strong defensive positions, whereas the centre, the massif northeast of Noyon, and the east, the Couchy forest, are well-nigh impregnable.

The west side yielded yesterday under pressure, and so dangerous may be the consequences if the British go forward that the enemy was forced to change his program of retreat to desperate resistance. Already the Noyon-Guiscard-Ham road is cut from its base by the occupation of the first named town, and is under French fire for a considerable distance. That is the principal artery from the salient.

For the moment the enemy is holding his ground. In the centre guns that he had hoped to withdraw are deluging the base of the pocket with gas and high explosives from the massif right ahead and the Coucy forest on the flank. On the west he is driving attack after attack against Debeney and Humbert.

No longer is it a question of a machine-gun battle. The German infantry is flung forward in waves, with grenade and bayonet. It is an exact parallel to what has been happening further north or even on a greater scale.

In military parlance the enemy has been "nailed" to battle. He would like to retreat but cannot. Foch, the motif of whose teaching at the war college was always attack, has forced his will upon the Germans. They are wasting precious divisions like water, and still the American Army, the greatest and most formidable of his famous strategic reserves, is not engaged in the battle.

NOYON MINED BY GERMANS

whose many caves and quarries whole battalions can hide, and where the crucial corner of the old Hindenburg line is within long gun range.

The preliminary action on Tuesday and Wednesday having arrested and set back the boche attempt to recover lost ground, we were this morning on the western border of Juvigny village. This was therefore the first objective, and I am assured that in capturing it the young American troops showed splendid spirit. It was practically their baptism of fire. They are to a large extent men recruited in Wisconsin and Michigan. They held trenches for a time in a quiet sector in Lorraine and afterward were in reserve during the Château-Thierry fighting.

From Juvigny they crossed the ravine immediately to the east, and always against obstinate resistance climbed up on to the plateau. From this point one has views over those terrible old battlefields of the Chemin-des-Dames and Laon is in full view.

To the left of the Americans the French at 10 A. M. had reached the crest. French aviators are doing their usual invaluable and heroic service.

Fierce Fight on St. Simeon.

Further away to the left are our front lines beyond the Roye Road, and further to the right the low ground, between the Oise and the slopes of Mount St. Siméon, on which desperate fighting is in progress as I write. This wooded height, rising far above the Cathedral towers, is the extreme point of the German salient east of Noyon, and they are defending it with the utmost obstinacy.

The town of Noyon was encircled yesterday by a famous division. Tirailleurs, or African native troops, attacked at the centre from the Compiègne Road, while zouaves, who are professional soldiers of French race, pushed around to the northwest, across the Roye Road to the Ham Road, and around to the east by Landrimont to the slopes of Mount St. Siméon.

When the two forces joined hands they began to climb the hillside. Here they had met this morning repeated counterattacks, hand-to-hand struggles, fluctuating from minute to minute, taking place especially on the west side, where the only corridor of retreat of the enemy, and that a very narrow one, is immediately threatened.

The stubbornness of this defense of the southern corner of their front has probably two reasons. If the block of hills extending from Noyon to Chauny could have been rapidly turned by Humbert the right of Mangin's army would have been free to cross the Oise, and the German lines on both sides of the river would be in great danger. The rapid advance of Debeney to the Neve would also probably compel the German Staff to order stiffer resistance both north and south of the Roye sector.

Progress North of Noyon.

Good progress has been made, especially to the north of Noyon, where we reached Hill Metre 84, right across the road to Ham, near the villages of Tarlefesse and Happlincourt.

Further northwest we occupied the twin villages of Beaurains, except the château, which is still holding out.

On the east zouaves have driven their way up to the south edge of the crest of Mount St. Siméon.

On the Ailette Mangin's forces have enlarged the bridgehead obtained yesterday by the capture of the hamlets of Villette and Courbesseaux.

A violent counterattack last night at Champs Village was repulsed. Fighting continues with ferocious intensity. The losses in such a battle could not be light, but the enemy has suffered with peculiar severity in his incessant massed counterattacks.

Among the new divisions he has brought into action to defend the hinge of the Siegfried line are the 5th Reserve and 223d, both of which had had only a week's rest before being re-engaged. Prisoners agree in saying that their orders were to hold their ground at any price.

There is here no question of elastic defense by echelonment in depth. All troops are in the front line. The Somme and Vesle fronts depend upon this bastion resisting, and on both sides this consideration governs this most dreadful trial of strength.

NO LEISURELY RETREAT FOR ENEMY THIS TIME

Prodigious Pounding by French Armies Gives General von Boehn No Respite.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Aug. 29.—Give the devil his due. The boche is a master of the art of retreat. He has practiced it much, and has learned much in the course of his practice from the days following the battle of the Marne four years ago onward. In his withdrawal from Roye, Lassigny, and Noyon to the Cambrai-St. Quentin line in March of last year he completed an operation prepared during the Winter months with meticulous care. The country having been systematically ravaged, there remained only on the last night to blow up all roads and bridges behind troops flying for dear life to the newly made trench system which the army had been persuaded to believe was impregnable.

This time, again, the retreating armies seem so far to have got away some of their material; but to achieve this result, and indeed to save themselves from complete disaster, they have had to suffer heavy losses in their resistance. It is a great difference, which may be enlarged before the next resting place of the legions of von Boehn is found. For this difference there are three reasons. The first is that Ludendorff had no time to prepare as Hindenburg did eighteen months ago. The second is that, under Gough, Fayolle, Humbert, and other Generals who found the trenches in front of them suddenly evacuated last year and ever since have been determined to pounce the moment the opportunity came, the allied armies have had months of experience of an invigorating and successful offensive, so that they completely lost the lassitude born of a Winter in fixed trenches.

Unprecedented Allied Energy.

The energy poured out ceaselessly during these months by the armies of Debeney, Humbert, and Mangin is prodigious and probably unprecedented in military history. The German staff certainly has never been able so rapidly to deliver blow after resounding blow. Yet, in moving about among them, I see no sign of exhaustion. The consequence is that the enemy has been kept in a constant state of agitation and fear that the least break here or there should upset all his plans, and to a considerable extent they have in fact been upset. And it is here we again see at work the third new factor, the importance of which I have often but never too much insisted upon—rapidly concerted co-operation of the different armies and the use of their reserves under the direction of the Allied High Command.

The strategical skill so manifest in the strokes that produced the retreats from the Marne to the Vesle, from the Aisne to the Oise, from the Matz to the Divette, and from the Avre to Lihons, shows itself not less powerfully in the latest events. When Humbert and Mangin invested Noyon by the west and south yesterday they met with a determined opposition, with every sign that the range of wooded heights north and northeast of the town would be resolutely held. In the suburbs every house had been turned into a machine-gun post, and barrages of heavy shells on the southern and western edges of it show that the enemy is in no great hurry to remove his artillery.

The fine turning manoeuvre by which Humbert obtained possession of the commanding height of Porquéricourt northeast of the town and the passage of the Oise by Mangin's left make the end certain. But it did not alone insure its coming speedily.

Debeney's smashing advance on the north was meanwhile changing the whole picture. I have described the fierce defense of Roye by the Germans, who knew perfectly well what its premature fall would mean. The First French Army knew something also, and would take no refusal.

Driven out of Roye, the enemy tried yesterday morning to put up a fight along the line organized some time ago, passing Etalon, Sept-Fours, Balatre, and Champien. Numerous machine guns and batteries which made much use of mustard shells covered the boche infantry, and bloody encounters took place about Champien.

At length, however, the line was pierced and turned, and during the afternoon our allies advanced six miles toward Libermont and westward of this place, which is due north of Noyon and only seven miles southeast of Ham. At Chaulnes also there was obstinate resistance with much use of gas shells. Nevertheless, Debeney's foreguards crossed the Somme between Cizancourt and Rouy le Petit during the afternoon—a splendid achievement.

Usually the German guns were set beside the road so that they could fire till the end. But at the last moment Debeney's rapidity, in turn, helped Humbert to bring his left wing across the Roye-Noyon highroad and double the movement, threatening the only two roads open for retreat from the Noyon salient. These, running respectively to Ham on the Somme and Jussy on the Crozat Canal, made it certain that the retreat could not be long postponed.

French airmen have been following the battle with deadly effect, and have done invaluable work in reporting the positions and needs of the advancing infantry.

Roye is less completely destroyed than had been supposed. The church is demolished, as are many houses, and the picturesque brick ramparts overlooking the Avre and its marshes west of the town suggested, but it is in no such hopeless case as, Montdidier.

AMERICANS PRESS RETREATING FOE

from another part of France in camions. Under cover of the dense darkness last night they were taken to the front line to relieve the French troops. The relief was completed at 4:10 o'clock, and at 7 o'clock the Americans attacked with the French on either side. Our troops were sandwiched between two famous French shock units.

Our men took prisoners fifteen minutes after they started. By 9 o'clock more than 150 prisoners had been counted, and more were coming in. There were officers among the prisoners, who expressed the greatest surprise that the Americans had attacked them. This is the first time this German division—the 7th Division of Prussians—has been against Americans, and they said that at first they thought them to be British.

One officer said he had been in Berlin ten days ago, and that the people were very much discomfited over the turn the war has taken. He himself believed the war would now end in negotiation. The German prisoners, as a whole, are above the average.

Americans Surprise Germans.

The attack in which the Americans took part was preceded by twelve hours of artillery preparation. During all this shelling very few boche shells came over. In fact, the German artillery work was negligible, indicating that their guns had been withdrawn. The Americans were assisted in the attack by small tanks, both male and female, which did great work tearing up machine-gun nests. A German Lieutenant commanding machine-gun detachments which were captured entire said the first thing he knew the Americans swarmed over the embankment on both sides of his position, and there was nothing for him to do but to surrender. The Lieutenant said his division had just been put into the line and was told to hold it at all costs. He said he had been told nothing about Americans being around. All indications were that the movement of Americans to the sector was completely unknown to the Germans.

I was with the men for twenty-four hours before they went into the attack, and nothing could have been more superb than their enthusiasm. They were just itching to get at the boche again. When they did, they showed they meant what they said. Bivouacked in beautiful woods, they spent most of yesterday afternoon sleeping, and just after nightfall got under way. Through villages of which only tortured upturned stones were left, and over shell and trench-marked fields, they filtered toward the front line. The first of them got there about midnight, and the relief of the French troops started, which was completed four hours later.

I was with the American commander in a big cave in a quarry some few kilometers back of the line. It was a weird scene there in the damp and dark of that cellar lit by electric bulbs that were not too numerous.

The sides of the cave rang like a bell in response to the never-ending reverberation of our guns, scattered all about thirty feet above us. Off in a corner a telephone operator sat in a niche manipulating the wire threads that tied our force together.

Sleeping men lay everywhere, safe there in the ground where the heaviest boche shell or bomb could not touch them. The hours wore along uneventfully until just after midnight came the order to attack at 7 o'clock.

In two minutes the whole of the big cave was awake. The weary telephone switchman was replaced by two fresh men. Outside, a motor cycle started its roaring, as messengers sped to the front with maps and orders. Our American military machine was at work. The gladsome sporting spirit of the thing was what gripped one. There wasn't a soul there who wasn't glad the scrap was at hand, and I knew the doughboys three kilometers ahead felt the same way about it.

The preparations for the attack continued until, along about 5 o'clock, they were completed, and then our artillery started with extra zest. Four and five guns would go at once. The sharp bark of the incomparable 75's was broken by the heavy roar of the 155's, and every now and then some big boy would speak, and the cave would ring like a bell. Down through the entrances to the cave seeped the pale light of dawn. It was cloudy. The guns kept on shooting, shooting. Presently the officers sat down to breakfast. The command was served in the cave.

Barrage Fire Cuts Loose.

Breakfast is over and quiet seems to fill the cave. In a few minutes it will be 7 o'clock. It is two minutes to 7 o'clock; now one minute.

Then all our guns cut loose. It was the barrage ahead of our attackers. There was no way to tell they had started back there in the cave, but we knew that behind the curtain of steel American doughboys were trotting ahead hunting the boche.

It was twenty minutes past 7 o'clock when the first messenger came in with the news that the attack had started and was going well. Then messages came every five minutes, messages from our companies, messages from the French on the right, messages from the French on the left. Here came a message saying a nasty German position was holding us up. The American commander read it and sent it on to the artillery commander; and a few moments later high explosives were tearing the boche position to pieces.

Eight o'clock brought the message that our forces were well on the way. Eight fifteen brought the message that they were still further on; and at 9 came word that the railroad had been reached at 8 o'clock at several points. This message told of the American boys going on further than ordered. Then messages simply told of digging in and bettering their positions. The operation technically was over.

We walked up the chalk steps into the sunlight. Standing on a hill one could see, in the woods of the valley all around, spurts of flame, and a moment later the sound of a gun would float over. There were no German shells. Overhead cruised allied planes, daring the Germans to come over; and further off other of our planes swooped low with machine guns ready for Germans showing their heads. The Allies appear to have complete air supremacy on this sector.

Down the road comes a line of boches — Prussians, wearing the scorning snarl that only Prussians wear. They look with profound contempt on all about. One wonders if they really mean it.

DEAD CZAREVITCH WAS PARENTS' IDOL

Spoiled, Mischievous, Willful, and Lovable in His Years of Babyhood.

WAS CENTRE OF THE COURT

Czar and Czarina Based Their Fatal Policy on Solicitude for His Future.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The Daily Telegraph says news was received in London yesterday confirming the reports of the death of the Czarevitch, but that no details are available of the manner of his end. Dr. E. J. Dillon, in a memoir in The Daily Telegraph, says:

"For a brief spell little Alexis's life was a symphony of sound and color. His transient wishes were divined and gratified before they could be expressed, for the imperial palace, unlike the homes of most children, lacked a will of its own, fixed and unbending, to meet and thwart the unreasoning whims of its babyish inmate. Correction was eliminated from his educational methods except by word of mouth, and then it had to consist mainly of suasion and gentle exhortation.

"His parents were constantly with him. They literally existed for him, made themselves his assistant nurses and menials, and when stern circumstances compelled them to separate themselves from him momentarily he remained still uppermost in their thoughts. During the most terrible crisis through which Czardom had ever yet passed the monarch to whom the majority of humankind still looked up with hope and his own subjects with awe was wont to steal away from affairs of state and spend hours in the nursery, lovingly superintending the bathing or toilet of his boy or dandling him fondly in his arms.

"Hardly ever did pain untune the melodious voice or contradiction harden the moral fibre of this little Prince. He was patiently waited on by crowned heads and ostentatiously honored by titanic soldiers standing sentry at doors. The military salutes of these were a source of intense delight to the child, whose innocent vanity they fostered.

"Discovering that his mere passing out or in at the palace portals sufficed to make the great guardsmen there go through all the movements of the military salute, he was wont to yield frequently to temptation and would cunningly contrive to slip away from his attendants and then, straightening his little body, raising his head, and aping the carriage and gait of veteran Generals, he would cast a sweet stern glance at the soldiers, walk past with a graceful attempt at stateliness, and then return, watching eagerly the while for the expected effect.

"The little Prince continued his amusement so long that the Emperor at last gave orders to the guardsmen that the boy when unattended was to be allowed to pass without military recognition. This was one of Alexis's greatest griefs during the first and happy period of his brief existence.

"Affection for his father and mother, spontaneous and tender, was tempered with unmistakable willfulness, half playful, half rebellious, which amused rather than disquieted the parents, who contemplated with joy the gradual building up of his soul abode.

"One of the last scenes of his boyish willfulness was enacted in the palace of Tsarskoe Selo, whither General Sir Arthur Paget carried the marshal's baton to Alexis's father. While the General and his adjutant, the Earl of Pembroke, were conversing with the Czar in the hall the little Grand Duke seized the General's hat, clapped it on the head of one of the marble statues, and laughed loud and heartily at the odd effect—so heartily that his elders desisted from their serious deliberations and involuntarily joined in.

"From his first birthday down to the fall of the dynasty Alexis was the centre of the court and the hub of Czardom. The private life of his mother and, to a large extent, the home policy of his father took their respective orientation from the child's current requirements and future career. The Czarina's fervent desire was to keep him ever with her, to superintend his education, to watch over his physical health and see that no harm befell him, while the Czar was resolved to resist every force that threatened to whittle down his prerogatives in favor of the enemies of autocracy or to diminish the extent of his empire in favor of its open adversaries. He felt it to be his duty to hand down both undiminished to his son.

"For the attainment of these aims the Empress religiously allied herself with Rasputin, while the Emperor chose as his political lieutenants the leaders of the reactionary party like Durnovo, Schwanebach, and Akimoff, and, when they died, their less gifted political friends. The twofold upshot was on the one hand the ruinous court scandal that centred around Rasputin, and on the other the succession of narrow-minded Ministers who exasperated the people, sat on the political safety valve, drove agitation down to subterranean depths, aggravated the system of espionage, and undermined the very groundwork of the régime.

"Hostilities with Japan even after the peace negotiations had progressed at Portsmouth, U. S. A., and only the ownership of half of the Island of Sakhalien was in dispute, were about to be resumed on the ground that all territorial possessions which Nicholas II. had received from his forebears must be handed down to Alexis intact, and therefore the Island of Sakhalien together with the rest."

GOMPERS LAUDED BY LLOYD GEORGE

Premier Says No Man Has Done More to Convince Civilization That It Must Fight to Victory.

QUEST OF MANY NOTABLES

War Now a Crusade for Justice, and America In to the End, Labor Leader's Message.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Samuel Gompers and the American Labor Mission were entertained by the British Government today at luncheon, where the visitors were welcomed by Lloyd George, G. H. Roberts and Lord Reading. The most significant features of the proceedings, in view of the British domestic controversy which is simmering over the Gompers visit, were the following statements in speeches by Lloyd George and Mr. Roberts. The Prime Minister said:

"It is a significant fact that in this country, with very few exceptions—I don't know that I can recall them now—the genuine leaders of labor men, who know what the need of the worker is, what workers' conditions are, have convinced themselves that victory in this war is essential to what they have been championing all their lives." Mr. Roberts, after saying that he was glad of the presence of their guests because it showed America felt that the maintenance of right was of even greater importance than the maintenance of peace, remarked: "Sam Gompers has never yet received encouraging replies from enemy countries."

This reference to Arthur Henderson was received with cheers and laughter. "Because," he continued, "the enemy knows full well that Sam represents the American people and their determination to have no parleying with enemy representatives until victory has been attained and until their Government is in a position to negotiate a clean and enduring peace. Sam Gompers and his colleagues more correctly interpret the attitude of British labor than do some of those who arrogate to themselves the title of labor leaders."

In his reply Mr. Gompers said nothing which could be construed as a reference to such divisions of opinion as exist in the British Labor Party. It was, however, noted that he made a passing remark about America's great appreciation of the splendid services performed by the Seamen's Union in the cause of freedom. The Merchant Seamen's League, of which J. Havelock Wilson is President, is at present conducting a strenuous campaign in favor of a boycott of the Germans in trade or commerce for a period of six years after the war, "a period which will be extended to make just retribution fit Germany's crimes against humanity until repentance comes."

Wilson is also appealing to trade unionists all over the country to form "a trade union labor party, represented in unions and in Parliament by bona-fide trade unionists." His circular says: "The future interests of labor depend on the solidarity, common sense and patriotism of the trade union movement. We desire to purge the trade unions of the anti-national, middle-class adventurers and cranks who have provided 10 per cent. of the funds and wield 90 per cent. of the power through wire-pulling, and who exploit labor for their own purposes."

The Merchant Seamen's League will be strongly represented next week at the Trade Union Congress at Derby, where it is Wilson's intention to display bulletins showing the number of working men on active service who favor a German boycott and desire "to clear the Bolsheviki out of the trades unions."

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Premier David Lloyd George, at a luncheon given by the Government in honor of Samuel Gompers, the President of the American Federation of Labor, today, proposed a toast to the health of the labor leader, who is visiting England.

"I do this for two reasons," said Mr. Lloyd George. "One of these is the country from which our guest comes—a country cradled and nurtured in freedom. It has now proved itself true to the great traditions of being the champion and the protector of freedom. In this undertaking it has placed the whole of its resources at the disposal of the Allies in the great struggle for liberty. Therefore we salute the flag of that glorious land of America.

"In the second place, we welcome Mr. Gompers and his friends for their own sake. Gompers is a name as well known in every country as in his own. Mr. Gompers is a man who, like myself, has forgiven those who in the past, have upbraided him for his policies. We are fully prepared to co-operate to secure the ideals which we have always held.

"Mr. Gompers is fighting the same democratic battle that this country has been fighting and is fighting today. In this country men of all classes have contributed in sacrifices and suffering, and I say without hesitation that victory in this war means more to those who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow than to any other class.

"It is significant that in this country, with a few exceptions, genuine leaders of labor are convinced that victory in this war is essential that they may achieve the great objects of their lives. Previous to the war German labor organized to destroy the domination of Prussian militarism. The task which they failed to accomplish by pacific means we are endeavoring to achieve by military means—their emancipation from bondage. If the war had not come for a few years there would have been an uprising of democracy in Germany.

"Fortunately there are few in the allied countries who do not believe this to be a righteous war. On behalf of the British Empire and the Allies, I desire to say that no man has done more than Mr. Gompers to convince the civilized world that it is vital to the interests of all that the war should be prosecuted to a triumphant conclusion."

George H. Roberts, Minister of Labor, in seconding the toast, said:

"The great American people is joined to the Allies to demonstrate to the world that the maintenance of right is of even greater importance than the maintenance of peace."

The Earl of Reading, Ambassador to the United States, said he considered Mr. Gompers one of the best and strongest supporters of the allied cause. He said Mr. Gompers had led the opinion of the people of America and caused the people to understand the situation. He ran great risks, but he took them, recognizing that capital and labor could work together in a good cause if only misunderstandings could be removed. Lord Reading expressed the hope that after the war Great Britain and the United States would continue to work in the closest amity and co-operation.

Mr. Gompers, replying, said he had talked with President Wilson before leaving the United States. He added that he shared the deep feeling and high ideals of the President that the United States was with Great Britain and her Allies to a victorious end of the war. Referring to the labor situation, Mr. Gompers said:

"We found ourselves in the position as to whether it were possible for the labor movement to live in a world dominated by Kaiserism and militarism. American labor found it impossible. We dare not lose. We cannot lose. We will win."

Mr. Gompers declared that the Americans were going to aid the Allies millions strong—with all their man power and resources, if necessary.

"We realise," he said, "that nothing is so important now as winning the war. It has ceased to be a war; it is a crusade for right, justice, and liberty."

CHEERS FOR VETERANS BACK FROM THE FRONT

Three Hundred Noncommissioned Officers, Many Decorated, Here to Train New Men in Draft.

Heralded only by the din of auto horns and the cheers of thousands of pedestrians, 300 war-tried noncommissioned officers of the American Expeditionary Force, many wearing decorations, were transported through the city in buses yesterday afternoon. The spontaneous welcome they got was unprecedented for staid Fifth Avenue, and Times Square quickly caught the spirit when the procession stopped there in its brief tour through the city's streets.

The hardy veterans, back only a few days, were picked men from many regiments, detailed to training camps at home to instruct newly drafted contingents. Nearly all were Sergeants, commanded by Lieutenant W. Laurence Hazard of the 128th Infantry, who said every man in the detachment had participated in fighting very recently at some point on the front. Eleven were members of the 165th, the old 69th Regiment of this city.

The first bus load, placarded "Pershing's Veterans, Just Back from France," also announced that "We Were the First to Cross the Ourcq." They were greeted first by throngs in the Pennsylvania Station, where they detrained from Camp Dix. A great cheer rose as the men quick-stepped out of the station and headed for the 69th Regiment Armory, Lexington Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street.

After a brief rest at the armory, the veterans were taken to luncheon, and later went up Fifth Avenue in buses. When the non-coms spied a Red Cross branch bureau they cheered wildly. Three cheers were given when they passed the Red Cross headquarters at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, and again when they passed the Red Cross branch in West Fifty-seventh Street.

"Gee, it's good to be back in God's country," sighed a 20-year-old non-com from an Atlanta regiment when the detachment had returned to the armory. "When we were here before, stationed at Camp Mills before leaving, New York hardly knew we existed. I always knew there was some 'pep' in the people of this old town. It showed us its brightest side this afternoon."

Last night details of the men attended various theatres as the guests of the managements.

11,986 MEN TO DEPART FOR CAMPS NEXT WEEK

Registrants to Go Will About Deplete the Class 1-A Lists in New York City.

Adjt. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill, acting under instructions from Provost Marshal General Crowder, has notified Draft Director Martin Conboy that New York City will be called upon for 11,986 men for general and limited service, the first contingents to be mobilized next Tuesday. The rest of the men will follow in daily contingents, the last mobilization being on Friday, Sept. 6.

The general service men are ordered to Camp Gordon, Ga., and to Camp Jackson, S. C., while the limited service men will go to Camp Greenleaf, Ga., and to Syracuse. The number of men called for general service is 6,853 and those called for limited service total 5,133.

The number of men called into service from each draft district in New York City, with the day of entrainment for each contingent, is shown in the following tables:

repeat the magnificent work which they did during the first questionnaire and classification period. Please acknowledge receipt of this, stating what steps you have taken to carry same into effect. CROWDER.

General Crowder and his staff have been making preparations for weeks in expectation of the passage of the new Man Power bill, and are in much better condition to register and classify registrants rapidly than at the time the original selective service law was passed. Complete instructions are already in the hands of all draft officials, and as far as possible General Crowder has seen to it that they have been thoroughly instructed in their duties.

Because of this early action, and the fact that a great organization was created with the application of the first selective service law, it is believed that the new registration will be carried out without any serious hitch.

The Department of Justice is co-operating with the office of the Provost Marshal General in a fight against any means which may be adopted by those who seek to evade the provisions of the new draft. Instructions have been sent out by the department to its agents throughout the country to hold themselves ready to give all possible aid.

Just before the Senate finally adopted the conference report there was an interesting statement by Senator Chamberlain, Chairman of the Military Committee.

Senator Thomas, author of the "work-or-fight" amendment, had made a speech protesting against the elimination of his section by the conferees. He and Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, both predicted industrial unrest without the control possible under such an amendment.

Replying, Senator Chamberlain stated that there was in the original draft law a clause specifying that when cause for an exemption from actual military service ceased, the exemption should cease also. This, he held, was sufficient authority for control.

"But," he said, "the Secretary of War has practically nullified the regulations and the law."

In support of this contention, Senator Chamberlain read from THE NEW YORK TIMES a recent statement, made by Secretary Baker after General Crowder had issued the work or fight order. The Secretary said the regulation had nothing to do with the labor situation in the country, and it was not intended to regulate labor by military rule, the order being intended to guide exemption boards in their decisions.

"Then the Senator's impression is that the Secretary might interpret the Thomas amendment in the same way if it were in the bill?" asked Senator Nelson, of Minnesota.

"Yes, absolutely, he might do so; the Secretary has the right to place his construction upon the law," answered Senator Chamberlain.

"That's so. I agree. We are at his mercy!" said Senator Nelson, heatedly. "I had two resolutions passed here asking how many swivel chair officers there are. The last resolution was passed two months ago. They say they must find out from the Philippines and Guam. The War Department practically says, 'I don't care a continental for Congress; I'll do as I please.' If the Thomas amendment survived, wouldn't the Secretary think he had power above Congress, and exercise his own sweet will?"

"I don't assume the rôle of a critic of the Secretary," replied Senator Chamberlain. "I can only say what he has done."

MURRAY IN SEMI-FINALS

Niles Puts Up Spirited Struggle Before Favorite, but Succumbs in Four Sets.

Robert Lindley Murray of Niagara Falls and William T. Tilden, 2d, of Philadelphia won their way to the semi-final round of the national singles tennis championship on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club yesterday afternoon. Murray is now bracketed in the upper half of the draw with Lieutenant S. Howard Voshell, while in the lower half Tilden awaits the winner of the fourth round match between Ichiya Kumagae of Japan and Lyle E. Mahan.

Because of these two players being one round behind it has been necessary to postpone the playing of the final round match until next Tuesday. Originally it was scheduled for Monday afternoon.

Murray came through yesterday's encounter against the famous Boston baseliner, Nathaniel W. Niles, with all of the laurels to his credit. In many respects the match was a repetition of the final round match between these two stars in the national patriotic tournament of last year, which Murray won. This year's contest proved a hard struggle for Murray, even though he was able to clinch the victory in four sets at 7—5, 6—4, 2—6, 7—5.

Tilden's victory was registered over Walter Merrill Hall, and probably never before in a championship contest did luck play such an important rôle at a critical moment. Hall had the laurels almost within his grasp only to fail lamentably on an easy kill that turned the complexion of the match from one of rosy cheer for Hall to the deepest indigo.

The catastrophe came to pass in the fourth set, the one which was incomplete after Friday's play. A rain storm had halted the contest when Hall was leading at 6—3, 1—6, 7—5, and 3—2, with the next game at deuce and Tilden serving. The Philadelphian took this game to make the score three all, but Hall swept through the next two games, breaking through Tilden's service in the second one to make the match 5—3 in his favor.

With his own service to back him in the next game, Hall gained a lead of 30—15, and he played a kill to the corner that almost gave him the next point. Tilden, however, was fighting with determination against the impending defeat, and made a remarkable get of the shot well beyond the baseline. In sheer desperation he tossed up a lob, and it barely managed to fall on Hall's side of the net. It looked for all the world like Hall's point. Just a tap would have played the ball for an ace. To make the shot meant that Hall would have been within point of match.

The sphere bounded high and Hall set himself for what was almost the winning shot. Then, to the amazement of the spectators and to the consternation of Hall himself, he missed the ball completely. He had lost sight of it momentarily in the glare of sunlight and it was that one fact alone which turned the tide of battle against the Middle States champion.

With his failure then his brilliant play was at once shattered, and Tilden, taking heart in a contest that gave him such a fortunate break, was able to blaze his way through to a convincing victory, Hall's play lacking all of the lustre and finish that had marked his earlier efforts.

Tilden took the fourth set by running off four straight games, and in the final set Hall was unable to summon his skill to the test and was able to win only one game. The score of the match was 3—6, 6—1, 5—7, 7—5, 6—1. How complete was Tilden's mastery at the close is told in the fact that he took nine of the last ten games.

In playing against Niles, Murray showed again the gradual improvement that has been making itself manifest in his play all week, his skill increasing with each match, seemingly to just the point of being able to win his way through to an advanced bracket. It is doubtful whether Murray has yet attained his greatest proficiency.

Niles made a superb stand in the last set after it was 5—2 against him, pulling it up to deuce against Murray's determined effort to finish off the contest. But the rally availed little in the long run, for Murray was determined that he would not be drawn into a fifth set and broke through Niles's service in the final game after the Bostonian had gained a lead of 40—15.

The one other feature match of the day saw the former national singles champion, Beals C. Wright, defeated by the sturdy little Japanese, Ichiya Kumagae. Wright had a lead of two sets to one, but he was unable to get either of the following two sets to clinch the victory.

In the last two sets Kumagae showed to far better advantage. Wright was plainly tired and Kumagae played his looping drive from the baseline with such telling effect that he won at 8—10, 6—3, 3—6, 6—1, 6—2.

One national championship was decided, Vincent Richards winning for the second time the boys' title when he defeated Abraham Bassford 3rd in three spirited sets at 6—2, 9—7, 7—5.

YANKEES BOW TO JOHNSON.

Weakened Club Finds Little Mercy in Washington Star.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Clark Griffith turned Walter Johnson loose against the weakened Yankees this afternoon and the victory, which had been a foregone conclusion from the time Walter began to warm up, was achieved to the tune of 6 to 1. The Washington marvel was at his best, simply toyed with the New Yorkers, and would have had a shutout but for a slip by Johnny Lavan.

Joe Finneran, pitching in a lost cause, got away poorly and then settled down to do fine work. His support failed him in the third and fourth innings to the extent of three runs which should not have been scored, a muff by Fournier making two possible and a poor peg by Pratt presenting the home team with another.

A pass to Shotton in the first inning sent the Senators on their way to victory. He advanced on Foster's out and scored on Judge's double to left. Joe completed the circuit when Milan lashed a double to right, and Schulte chased Milan across with a single to right.

Foster opened the third inning with a single and reached third on Judge's sacrifice and Milan's infield out. Schulte popped an easy fly to Fournier, but instead of retiring the side Jack dropped it and Foster counted. Shanks's scratch hit and a clean single by Lavan sent Schulte over with another run. In the fourth Pratt made a poor throw and this was followed by Foster's single, an infield out and Milan's long fly to Hummel, which scored another run.

New York's lone run arrived in the sixth. Walters was safe on Lavan's fumble and reached third on Baker's single, after Hummel had fanned. Pratt popped to Shanks for what should have been the third out, and Fournier followed with a scratch hit on which Walters scored.

Giants today with Brooklyn, 2 games, 1:30 P. M. Polo Grounds. Adm. 50c.—Advt.

GIANTS WASTE NO TIME ON DODGERS

Shortest Game of Season Finds New York Victor Over Brooklyn by 1 to 0.

The Giants and the Brooklyns mingled in the briefest argument of the season at the Polo Grounds yesterday, New York oozing over a run in the last of the ninth after exactly fifty-six minutes of play. Five minutes at the start of the pastime were taken up when Arthur Fletcher was presented with a $50 check for hitting the bull sign in left field last June. That one run at the eleventh hour was enough to win for the Giants, 1 to 0, with no one out.

This was the shortest and snappiest game that has been played in New York since the Giants and Phillies ripped off an eight-and-a-half-inning argument in thirty-three minutes five years ago. The baseball record for a short game was made by Mobile and Atlanta in 1910 when they played a game in thirty-two minutes.

Coombs gave the Giants four scattered hits up to the ninth, and then the time-worn veteran's arm showed signs of rust. Doyle, the first Giant up in the ninth, whacked a single to right, Fletcher laid down a bunt along the third base line, beating out O'Mara's throw, which sailed over Daubert's roof. Doyle went to third and Fletcher to second on the hit and the wild heave. Zimmerman got a walk and loaded the corners.

Ordinarily a situation of this sort on the Harlem meadow would work the populace up to a point where vocal cords and nerves were stretched to the breaking point. Not so yesterday; not a sound was heard but the rumbling of the elevated trains. It was very much like an undertakers' convention, with a limited number of delegates present.

Bash Compton eased himself up to the plate, planted a nice single to left field, and Doyle raced home with the winning run. It all happened so quick that the players had to look up at the score board before they believed it was over.

Ed Sicking left the club yesterday, his draft board at St. Bernard, Ohio, informing him that it would like very much to see him early next week in relation to a new step the young men under 45 are taking.

The score:

WOMEN IN GOLF FINAL.

Miss Rosenthal to Play Miss Hadfield for Western Title.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Semi-final matches in the women's Western golf championship at Indian Hill today ran true to form. Miss Frances Hadfield of Milwaukee won from Miss Corella Lukens of Edgewater, 5 and 3, while Miss Claire Rosenthal of Chicago overcame Mrs. C. O. Gillette of Ridge, 4 and 3, the two matches ending on the fifteenth green within three minutes of each other.

Miss Rosenthal thrilled the spectators on the ninth hole by approaching to within three feet of the hole on a knoll green from a roadway to which she had pulled her tee shot.

Ticket and Bondage Make Show of Exterminator in Cohoes Handicap.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, Aug. 30.—That W. S. Kilmer's Exterminator was a lucky horse to win the Kentucky Derby was indicated this afternoon when he finished a poor third to Andrew Miller's Ticket and Mrs. James Arthur's Bondage in the Cohoes Handicap at a mile and a quarter, which was the feature of the card.

Though Exterminator was giving away a lot of weight he was the early favorite, but the money poured in on Ticket until he was an equal choice with the Derby winner when they went to the post. The going was much the same as when Exterminator won the Derby, but the muddy track also suited Ticket, which was capably ridden by Shuttinger.

Fairy Wand set the pace with Exterminator in second place in the run along the back stretch. There Ticket was last, but lapped on Bondage. Rounding the turn Ticket moved up and most of the field going wide let Bondage upon the inside. This pair quickly ran over the others and with Bondage in the deep going on the rail Ticket was not pressed to win by a length and a half. Exterminator was eight lengths back of Bondage.

Favorite players had another successful day as four of the choices finished in the van.

The Saratoga Cup and Hopeful Stakes to be run tomorrow has attracted many new visitors, including Harry Payne Whitney, who came from New York to see his sturdy three-year-old Johren measure strides with Roamer in the cup race. This will practically be a match race, as both Sun Briar and Cudgel have dodged the issue.

The Hopeful, the richest two-year-old stake of the meeting and perhaps of the season, has attracted twenty of the best youngsters, with Sweep On and Hannibal scheduled to carry 130 pounds each.

MISS DETROIT III. VICTOR.

Takes First Lap of Gold Challenge Cup Motor Boat Races.

DETROIT, Aug. 30.—Miss Detroit III. of the Detroit Yacht Club won the first thirty-mile heat for the Gold Challenge Cup on the Detroit River course today, averaging 52.1 miles an hour.

In the first lap Miss Detroit III. almost equaled the world's record for a five-mile lap, made at Minneapolis last year by Miss Detroit II., averaging 59.43 miles an hour.

Miss Minneapolis, representing the Minneapolis Boat Club, finished second, averaging 48.66 miles an hour, showing 49.6 miles an hour in her first lap.

Whippoorwill, Jr., of the Lake George Yacht Club had magneto trouble in the second and third laps and did not finish until nearly sundown. Miss Detroit II., entered by the Miss Detroit Power Boat Association, the champion cup defender, withdrew after two laps because of engine trouble.

The Betty M. won the handicap express cruiser race, beating the Aeolus by one-fifth of a second in a ten-mile race. The Aeolus started 2 minutes and 44 seconds before the winner.

Can You Take Charge of Nine Factories?

IF YOU HAVE a good working knowledge of foundry and machine shop operation, coupled with executive ability of a high order, there is a real opportunity for you supervising the work of nine or more local factory managers. The concern needing such a man is long established, and the recognized leaders of one of America's rapidly growing and promising industries.

WE NEED A MAN who can size up the conditions in a factory, outline the policy to be followed and get the proper co-operation from the local manager in carrying out that policy.

TO QUALIFY for this position you must have a sound foundation of operating experience and knowledge, combined with tact, vision and an appreciation of the problems which must be solved in a large way in the coming years of industrial readjustment.

IN ANSWERING this advertisement please give details about your experience, tell us what factories you have managed, or assisted in managing, your age, whether you are married or single, approximately what salary you would desire, and whether or not you are free to accept a position in the Middle West.

IF YOU PREFER, we will consider your application if written over the name of a friend.

A RALLYING POINT FOR RUSSIA.

The last legal Russian Government, the only Russian Government ever chosen by the people, seems to be on the point of beginning to function. At Samara, under the protection of the Czechoslovaks, about 200 members of the Constituent Assembly elected last Fall have assembled, and, according to report, have selected what amounts to a provisional Cabinet, consisting of General Alexieff and MM. Stepanoff and Avksentieff. The convocation of the Constituent Assembly has been demanded not only by the great majority of the Russian exiles in New York and Paris, but by the recently established Government in the vicinity of Archangel, which is headed by veteran revolutionaries whose integrity hardly even a Bolshevik could dispute.

The prompt suppression of General Horvath, the demand for the Constituent Assembly formulated in Archangel as soon as allied occupation gave the non-Bolshevist parties there a chance to talk, and now the meeting of this body behind the Czechoslovak army, all give the lie to the declaration that the Allies in Russia are supporting counter-revolutionary forces. The majority in the Assembly is composed of Social Revolutionists, the party of Kerensky, the party which included most of the leaders who were risking their lives for the revolution in the days when the heroes of Bolshevism dwelt in the safe serenity of Zimmerwald or the Bronx.

The Social Revolutionists were never regarded as "counter-revolutionary" until the Bolsheviki applied that name to everybody not of their own strictest sect. They have been anti-German all the way through; they opposed the peace, they are credited with the killing of Mirbach and Eichhorn; they are certainly not slaves of capitalism. The Constituent Assembly represents as nearly as possible the people of Russia, according to democratic ideas—and it must be remembered that the theory of the working-class dictatorship, as applied by the Bolsheviki, is as fundamentally opposed to the theory of democracy as is that of the divine right of the Hohenzollerns. The Bolsheviki ask: "Should the conscious workers of the "country submit to the dead weight of "the unconscious?"

Why, no, according to the theory which assumes that I and my side are conscious, and that you and your side and all those who disagree with me are unconscious. But on the theory of democracy that is exactly the sort of thing that people do submit to as a matter of principle. The conscious voters of New York, it may be said, were overwhelmed by the unconscious last November, but they did not proceed to send armed men to disperse the new administration when it took office. The Constituent Assembly is something that democrats can support whole-heartedly in Russia.

There is evidence that the bulk of Russia will also support it. The greatest service the allied forces which are to go into Russia can render is to supply a real rallying point for the Russian people who oppose the Bolsheviki. Constituent Assembly is a long word, particularly in its Russian form; you cannot expect enthusiasm for it to sweep the country as rapidly as Napoleon swept France on the return from Elba. But the Constituent Assembly is what democrats must regard as the Government of Russia, and it is well to know that its supporters are with us.

UNCOWED ARIZONA.

Direct government is about to do its perfect work in Arizona. On the statute book of that State a compulsory vaccination law slept unregarded until smallpox appeared. Then the great company of fly-gobblers, wiseacres, and cranks burst into full cry. "I don't take no stock in vaccination." "A cousin of my first wife "knows a woman that knows a man "whose grandnephew's little boy lost "his left leg from being vaccinated." So Rumor, wagging all her tongues.

Out come the petitioners. Refer this vaccination law to the people.

Woes accumulate for Arizona. It is bad enough to have the smallpox. It is too bad to have the initiative and referendum. To have 'em both is a thousand times "2 much."

THE YELLOW STREAK.

Before sentencing the I. W. W. leaders Judge Landis considered each individual case. It is not in the least surprising to read that "he was visibly affected by the stories of some," miserable tools of their own vanity and of the craft of other men, who joined in the devil's-dance from mere excitement, confident that nothing could happen to them and never thinking of their families, and now see those hapless families looming large. It is not surprising to read that "some "of the defendants made pitiful pleas "for mercy." The respect due to a martyr is given only when he counts the cost of what he is about to do and counts it as nothing. A Paul who abjures the moment the Roman soldier seizes him by the arm does not become a Saint Paul. Most of the I. W. W. and all their like, pacifists, Sinn Feiners, or whatever they may call themselves, have shown themselves yellow clear through the moment they looked in the hard eyes of the law they had flouted and laughed at. The fleeing O'Leary, the vanished Charles Francis Phillips, these martyrs are all of the same stripe. So far there has not been a single one of them to face the music without whimpering or crawling except Emma Goldman and her partner Berkman.

Haywood, it is true, and some others put on what superficially appears to be a bold front. He declared that "no member of the I. W. W. is guilty of any act against the United States," and that if released he would go right on with his activities. But this is not martyrdom. It is exactly what Rose Pastor Stokes did. When arraigned for attacks on "the Government" she sought to escape by a quibble; she said that by "Government" she meant only the Wilson Administration. So Haywood, the head of an organization whose declared object is revolution against the United States, quibbles; "no member" has been "guilty of any act against" that United States against which the whole organization has declared revolutionary war. Between the quibbles and loopholings of Haywood and the tears of his deluded tools there is no great choice. The pacifists are always saying that it takes more courage to stand out against the Government than it does to go to France. Let them prove it; let just one of them show a grain of that courage. Let them not all, to the last man and woman, with the exception of two anarchists about whose courage there has never been any doubt, show the yellow streak.

THE URUGUAYAN MISSION.

Seven or eight years ago Georges Clemenceau, after his South American travels, described the Uruguayans as "impulsive idealists." In that respect they are closely akin to their brethren of North America. We have had notable proofs in 1917 and 1918 of that idealism of theirs, though, like ours, it is rather a basic moral and intellectual characteristic than a product of impulse.

Citizens of a stable republic, there is nothing parochial in their policy. In this war they saw the common interest of all the Americas. They ranged themselves on the side of freedom. Their Government, approving the position of Brazil in reference to Germany, advocated "a close union of action" of all American countries, so that a violation of international law against one of them should be an offense against all.

We remember with what enthusiasm Montevideo, decked with American flags, her streets full of marching thousands, kept the Fourth last year, awaiting the American squadron, with what fine hospitality and cordial welcome that squadron was received and entertained. We remember that the Fourth was made a national Uruguayan holiday this year. We remember, too, that eight German steamers, requisitioned by the Uruguayan Government, have been leased to our Emergency Fleet Corporation.

By word and act Uruguay has shown her good-will and sympathy. The honors, all too little, that are paid to the Uruguayan mission, now in this city, are but a feeble installment of a great gratitude.

The head of that mission of distinguished personalities is the Foreign Minister, Dr. Balthasar Brum, a protagonist of Pan Americanism, of a concert of the American republics as to the war. Of an intellect at once brilliant and solid, Dr. Brum has the wide and enlightened views of the highest type of Ibero-American statesmanship, a type that more and more we are coming to know; and to know it is to admire it. To Dr. Brum, by the way, is due the reception of the American squadron at Montevideo, now the South Atlantic naval centre of the Allies.

To this great Pan American, then, and his associates, the luncheon given yesterday by the Pan American Society was, from its source, a peculiarly appropriate honor; and the reception at the City Hall symbolized the good feeling of New York toward proved friends and the desire for more intimate trade relations between Uruguay and the United States.

Those relations have been much enlarged in the last four years. Uruguay's exports to the United States have grown from less than $2,000,000 in 1913 to more than $33,000,000 in 1917. In the same time our exports to her have risen from less than eight to more than eighteen millions. She is in the fortunate position of a creditor country. Her prosperity rests on solid and lasting foundations. Her meats, her wools, her hides, her new wealth of wheat, insure her a growing and permanent good fortune. It can never be greater than Americans of the United States wish for her.

DISCIPLINE IN ONONDAGA.

So they're "disciplining" Frank Hendricks, long the Republican chief of the Onondaga Reservation, are they? He is a "boss," of course, and as he is nearly 84, there is small hope of his repenting into a "leader." He was a leader, technically and in spite of himself, so long as he stuck to that incomparable altruist, Governor Whitman. When, in a fatal hour last July, he put his fist to the round robin asking that man Roosevelt to run for Governor, his leadership dropped off him. He became a heretic and a reprobate. The saints of Syracuse were compelled to excommunicate him.

And it must be admitted that he seems to be doubly the victim of the signing habit. He had signed a petition for the renomination of the Republican Representative of the Onondaga District. Then, suddenly the other day, he "came out for" the nomination of a Dry candidate. Will it be believed that this penitential act, this reversion toward the Governor, who ratifies the prohibition amendment on his own hook—and quite outside of his business and function as Governor—was seized upon by "the organization" as occasion for the expected punishment of the deserter of Whitman.

Francis Hendricks was Mayor of Syracuse when Mr. Whitman, a boy of 12, was beginning the Latin reader. He had been a conspicuous figure in the Assembly, had fought the Beldenites implacably, and helped elect Frank Hiscock and Mr. Evarts to the United States Senate, and became Collector of this port by the time Mr. Whitman got his sheepskin in 1891.

Suave, adroit, businesslike, he was a capable legislator, one of the shrewdest of politicians, an excellent grabber of "patronage." Now he is an overthrown boss, if he be really overthrown, while George Aldridge is in the odor of sanctity. As the sometime Chairman of the Senate Committee on the Manufacture of Salt, perhaps Mr. Hendricks has been too inclined to take with the customary grain the legend of the sharp difference between a boss and a leader. Uncle George, more tolerant and humorous, accepts it with a joyous wink.

THE BRIDGEPORT LABOR DECISION

The decision in the Bridgeport labor case is not chiefly remarkable because it concerns 60,000 workers in sixty-six shops, mostly engaged on war work. The strike started in a few shops, and all other shops adhered to the decision in advance. The decision is by an umpire, Otto M. Eidlitz, and is put into effect by the War Labor Board. Thus it is not a recommendation by a deadlocked board, such as was given in the telegraph case, but embodies the full force of national control of industry. If this award does not compose the quarrel, it is hard to see what resource is left. The award is not a compromise in the sense of splitting the difference, for some of the issues did not admit of that solution. But there is a fair balance of decisions flatly for and against the contentions on each side.

The men get an advance of wages, but the advance is to the offer of the employers, which is held to be "fair and reasonable." To the extent that the strikers do not get their full demands it must follow that they were not fair and reasonable. The strikers lose their chief demand in principle. They demanded that their work should be classified and that a minimum wage should be fixed for each class. The umpire holds that it would too greatly disturb industry to alter the established system during the stress of war work. In the background is the difficulty of deciding who shall divide the men into classes, fix the rates for each class, and apportion the workers to them. Neither the unions nor the employers could be trusted to do it alone without abandoning the entire wage contention. Whichever fixed the classes and their pay would rule the shop.

This is so clear to the men that yesterday, when the award was but one day old, the machinists threatened to renew the strike. The award was enough in their favor to have been approved by Joint Chairman Walsh, but it is doubtful whether he can control the forces which he has unloosed, however earnestly he may press upon the men the benefits and blessings of industry under the supervision of representatives "democratically selected," and therefore without the prejudices of those who find the money to pay wages. The reference is to a novel and untried—therefore admirable—method of regulating the relation of labor and capital. The award establishes a local community board, to sit under a Chairman appointed by the Secretary of War and to represent his authority. This local board is to consist of equal representation of employers and employés, and is to consider questions which cannot be settled by committees in the respective shops. The decision says: "We have passed the day of the individual to the day of the group, and "the will of the group shall have "precedence over the will of the individual." It is hard to say whether this alters everything or nothing. Already there were too many groups. There were groups of labor against capital, of unionists against non-unionists, and bargains by groups which were to prevent quarrels only made them harder to settle by converting the opposing groups into armies. Now we are to have groups so new that they defy instant classification. We have had decisions by trades, but never by cities. Who can foresee or foretell how the mind of a community labor board will work?

These are merely the novel points of the decision. Such other points as the grant of a minimum wage, equal pay for equal work by men or women, the eight-hour day, and the right to join unions call for no remark. But just what will be the status of unions when power is given to shop committees and a local community board? Clearly this is a settlement for war-time only.

ONLY A REGULAR.

It is not always youth that won't be denied. One of the American winners of the Medal of the Legion of Honor in France is a regular officer in his fifty-ninth year and a few months older than General Pershing. The hero in this case is Brigadier General Beaumont Bonaparte Buck, a Mississippian. Possibly when he was in the third class at West Point he hazed his present commander, who entered the Military Academy two years after him. General Buck earned the Medal of the Legion of Honor by leading the charge into Berzeylesee. Most of the officers of the attacking battalion had fallen under a terrible fire. The moment was critical. Leadership was called for, General Buck passed through his line, ran along the front of it to steady and encourage the men, put himself at their head, and gave the order "Forward!" Possibly he felt that an American officer in France whose middle name was Bonaparte could do nothing else, but only to familiars and classmates was it known what the B. in his signature stood for. It will be a surprise to others that it concealed Bonaparte. We fancy that all the General thought of was living up to the traditions of the United States Army. A battalion needed leading—damn the machine guns! Brig. Gen. Hamilton S. Hawkins, white of hair and sixty-odd, did the same thing at San Juan, and the Spaniards shot him in the foot. An American General is after all only a mature Second Lieutenant when danger threatens and duty calls. It's all in the day's fighting. The French General who pinned the coveted medal on Buck's breast must have been delighted with that middle name.

When we come to look up General Buck's record we find he was "only a regular." His opportunities for distinction were few and illusive. From post to post and detail to detail he pursued his humdrum course cheerfully. He climbed slowly to a Majority in 1908, always in the infantry. Twice he was commandant of cadets at lesser military schools in Missouri and Texas, deadly dull business; recruiting duty sometimes, not exciting; two years with the Massachusetts National Guard, 1915-1917; apparently he went to France with the New England Division in June, 1917, and mighty glad of it! There was a thrill now and then in three years in the Philippines, but little glory and no promotion; and on the Mexican border in 1914 things did look promising. But the chance to get killed, or vindicate the paternal choice of a middle name for a bouncing boy, never came until the General reached the fair fields of France desecrated by the boche. The General's home is in Dallas, Texas. They knew he would "make good."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

History as Written in Germany. Surely the Germans are a strange people, and it is hard to tell which is the more astonishing, their ability to believe anything told them by their Kaiser and his Generals or the confidence of the military and political leaders that anything they choose to say will be accepted as the truth. The latter form of trust has been beautifully illustrated during the last few days in the official reports sent out for home consumption from the scenes of active operations.

These communiqués have been fairly accurate in the sense that they have not often made literally false statements as to the results of the fighting, but never has there been an explicit admission of defeats, of reverses, or of compelled retirements. Always there has been offered the poor substitute for victory that the Allies have "failed to break through," with never a hint that the Allies have not tried to break through, and that what they sought—and attained—was the forcing back of the whole German line, with the incidental and highly important infliction of enormous losses of men and material.

Instead of stating that this or that town has been taken by the enemy, the German reports usually leave the taking to be inferred—or not inferred—from a brief mention of subsequent activities several miles to the eastward. Yesterday, for instance, the only news the Germans had about the fall of extremely important positions was this: "Forefield fighting took place in front of our new lines east of Bapaume and Péronne and east of Noyon." Of like quality was the information that "the town [Noyon] lies in front of our battlefront." Why it lay there was not revealed, and not a word was said about the desperate fighting for many hours that was vainly done by the Germans before they yielded the place.

There must be at least a few civilians in Germany who read the official reports map in hand, and who therefore pierce these childish subterfuges and see plainly enough what the course of events has been. The military critics of the German press all do, of course, and some of them, recently, have admitted, by laboriously explaining, what has really happened, but the official chroniclers go calmly on, telling such part of the truth as their masters think it expedient to disclose, and never a bit more.

Demanding Pay from Neighbors. Probably it has never occurred to the inhabitants of London, or the people living on the south coast of England, that they have a claim for financial compensation from their Government—from Great Britain as a whole, that is—for losses inflicted by the German air raiders. They have taken their ills as the fortune of war, realizing, presumably, that they always had, or should have, kept somewhere in the back of their minds the greater danger they would risk in case of foreign attack, and that when the ever-present possibility turned into an actuality they should balance their adversity against the past advantages they have enjoyed.

That is the sportsmanlike way of looking at the situation, and it is the sensible way, too. A different view is taken in Germany. The Rhine towns, though they have profited much from their proximity to the French frontier, have made a united demand for recognition of what they think their right to payment for the destruction brought upon them by the French and British barbarians who are so lost to all sense of the proprieties as to drop bombs in such parts of Germany as they can most conveniently reach. Such conduct, of course, is to them entirely different from that of German aviators, for the latter only bomb cities that deserve it—cities outside of Germany.

Perhaps the other and safer German towns will recognize the justice of recompensing the Rhinelanders for what they have suffered, but somehow the likelihood of their doing it does not seem large. The chances are that until they begin to hear their own roofs crashing above their heads they will see the case much as it appears from a distance—as one, in other words, that illustrates the varying impingements of war, and while they may sympathize deeply with their unlucky fellow-countrymen, they will let it go at that. None of them, one may be sure, whether living near to or far from the Rhine, will see in the raiding of London or Paris a justification for raiding Cologne or Mannheim. For that, however, they should not be regarded as of unique obtuseness. Some of our own pacifists show a like inability, take no account of provocation, and count a return blow as rather wickeder, if anything, than the one first struck.

Telling the Truth in Ireland. As explanation for the unexpected success of the recruiting campaign now going on in Ireland, it is stated that the speakers at the meetings in Dublin and elsewhere emphasize the fact that the soldiers they seek are not to fight the battles of England, but those of a war that is equally America's and France's and Italy's—in short, that of the whole world against the common enemy, Germany. That makes it Ireland's war, too, of course, as it should, with Irishmen other than those whose real sentiment is not disinclination to fight for England, but a fierce desire to see her destroyed.

Only that desire can account for the existence of pro-German Irish, and even they, probably, would not think of a German triumph with any more joy than anybody else if they did not know in their hearts that it is an utter impossibility while any non-Germans are left alive.

How much of content there would be in Ireland under German rule can be imagined—if none at all is imaginable—and so can be the affection which the Sinn Feiners would have for German drill sergeants and German policemen.

The Battle at Tannenberg in 1410.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Sunday, Aug. 25, the author of an article on the Baltic provinces speaks about the victory over the Teutonic Knights in the battle of Tannenberg in 1410 as a Polish victory. This is a misstatement of a historic fact that calls for denial. The campaign against the Teutonic Knights that resulted in such a blow for them in the battle of Tannenberg was started and fought by Lithuanians. The Commander in Chief on the battlefield was the Lithuanian Grand Duke Vytautas. The Poles as well as the Czechs were only assistants. Lithuania furnished over 90,000 troops for the battle, while the Polish troops numbered less than 50,000, or half as many as the Lithuanians. To speak about the battle of Tannenberg as a Polish victory is to deny historic fact.

"NOT PEACE, BUT A SWORD!"

Not peace, but a sword!
Retributive hosts of the Lord,
See that your task is well done!
Shall that which was nobly begun
Fail in the end, for the sake
Of short-sighted tears?—the world wake
To find itself duped as before,
By one who resoundingly swore
His dearest ambition was peace?
Not so shall our agonies cease!

Let those who will, grieve—
(With deep-ringing groans to deceive!)
Mourning that millions must bleed
And perish till mankind be freed.
Belgium, assaulted but brave,
And France, overwhelmed by the wave
Of insolent greed—did these fear
To check the Beast's frightful career?
Did Britain count Honor well lost
And shrink from war's terrible cost?

Who wept for their woes?
Not they who would pity our foes!
Heed not the impudent plea
For peace that leaves criminals free—
Blameless, enriched by their crime,
And cleverly biding their time
Safely to strike, and to win!
Such softness, such blindness, were sin.
O Justice, thy keen, cleansing sword
Must establish the Peace of the Lord!

TELLS OF URUGUAY'S SYMPATHY IN WAR

Dr. Brum, Head of Mission, Declares His Country Looks to United States to Win.

WELCOMED BY THE MAYOR

Financiers, Diplomats, and Merchants Greet Visitors at a Luncheon Given by Pan American Society.

Headed by Dr. Baltazar Brum, Foreign Minister, the visiting Uruguayan Mission received an enthusiastic welcome on its arrival in this city yesterday. At the City Hall the members of the mission were officially welcomed by Mayor Hylan, and accorded the freedom of the city. Following these ceremonies, the visitors were guests at luncheon given in their honor at the Bankers Club by the Pan American Society. Here they were greeted by a distinguished gathering of financiers, diplomats, and merchants, among whom were John Bassett Moore, President of the Pan American Society, and Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, who acclaimed the presence of the mission as the opening of a new era in the development of political, commercial, and economic relations between this country and Uruguay.

Aside from Dr. Brum, the mission included Dr. Cesar Miranda, First Vice President of the Uruguayan House of Representatives; Dr. Javier Mendivil, member of the Uruguayan Senate; Dr. Adrubal Delgado of the Department of Finance, Lieutenant Juan Canosa, and Dr. Justo Jose Mendoza. On their arrival at the Pennsylvania Station, the visitors found awaiting them Special Deputy Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker, the Mayor's Secretary, Grover Whalen, and a large escort of mounted police. Escorting the Commissioners from Washington were Jordan H. Stabler, representing the State Department; Colonel William Kelly, representing the army, and Commander Augustin T. Beauregard, representing the navy.

The visitors were taken to the Biltmore, where they will stay while in this city. From there, preceded by an escort of motor cycle corps, they were conducted in automobiles to the City Hall, being met on their way down at Thirty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue by 350 Pershing veterans, who were being conveyed from the Pennsylvania Station to the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory. The members of the Uruguayan party rose from their seats and cheered the soldiers.

The party swung into the City Hall Park, to the cheers of many thousands of spectators. A detachment of 500 Naval Reserves from Pelham Bay was drawn up on one side of the entrance, and a large detachment from the 9th Coast Artillery flanked the other side of the entrance. On top of the City Hall the Uruguayan flag was floating with the Stars and Stripes, and the arrival of the mission was the signal for the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the Uruguayan national anthem. Mayor Hylan delivered a brief address of welcome, in which he paid a tribute to the democracy of Uruguay. Dr. Brum made a short response in Spanish, in which he thanked the Mayor and the citizens of New York for the cordial reception extended to the mission.

Introduced by Mr. Moore.

At the luncheon of the Bankers Club, John Bassett Moore, who presided, introduced Dr. Brum to the assembled guests, with an address in which he spoke of the high esteem entertained in this country for the progressive development of the social, political, and economic institutions in Uruguay, and emphasized the great contribution which the South American republic was making to the advancement of Pan American ideals. Speaking of the striking manifestations of the spirit of American fraternity that have bound Uruguay to the United States in the past, Mr. Moore said:

"We shall not soon forget the record reception given at Montevideo last year to the squadron of Admiral Caperton, not only because of its spontaneous cordiality, but also because of the remarkable Pan American declaration which marked the occasion. While there was a great popular outpouring in demonstration of sympathy with the Republic of the North in the great struggle in which it was and still is engaged, the President, by a vote of the Cabinet and with the concurrence of the Senate issued a proclamation, by which it was declared that, whereas the Uruguayan Government had announced the principle of American solidarity in the sense that offenses against the rights of any country of the continent were to be regarded as offenses by all, no American country which, in defense of its rights, was in state of war with nations of another continent should be treated as a belligerent."

Dr. Brum in his address proclaimed the sympathy of Uruguay for the allied cause. Although the republic is not at war with Germany, it had broken diplomatic relations with that country as early as October, 1917.

"I come to tell you," he said, "that my compatriots are impatient to see the ideal of Pan Americanism realized. To this part of the world shall it be given to face the future and destroy that imperialism which pretends that force is superior to justice and that selfish interests should come before right.

"I am an enthusiast for Pan Americanism, and recall with great satisfaction the first Pan American Congress called by a fellow-student. The young members of the Congress proclaimed the union of the Americas and voiced in loud tones the ideals of the American people. With depth of feeling I can justly say that I have seen the realization of these early prophetic words.

"I offer my vote for the high ideals of Pan Americanism, and pay my humble tribute to this noble country and offer my best wishes for its success in the great struggle in which she is now engaged and to President Wilson, who incarnates the idealistic spirit of all the people of this great Republic."

Country's Horizon Enlarged.

Mr. Vanderlip said in part

"We are frequently told there is to be a war after the war—a war in which the battlefield is to be the world's markets and the contestants the great industrial nations. Its successes will be the mark of which contestant can offer to neutral nations the greatest service; and the neutral nations should prosper by the struggle.

"Just at the moment South America, and notably Uruguay, is a creditor of the United States; but normally South America will want capital. For the moment we are withholding our gold from all claims not directly related to winning the war. But normally we shall have capital to export. Not only has the United States become the possessor of far greater wealth than any other nation ever had in the world, but the war has enlarged our horizon.

"At home we have taken a political stand against trade combinations. But we have recently passed a law which permits combinations for the purposes of foreign trade, and I note that the great neighbor of Uruguay has recently protested, saying that if we believe trade combinations are bad for our own people, we should not permit them to exercise a malign influence on the lives of other people. The protest is logical, if we are to continue the same attitude at home that we have had; but I believe the whole commercial world has come to see that efficiency lies in cooperation properly controlled rather than in enforced competition. At home we shall continue to demand fair trade practices, but I do not believe we will continue to purchase fair trade practices at the price of prohibitions against efficiency."

PRINCESS MARY CHOSEN

To be Honorary Colonel in Chief of the Famous Royal Scots.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The King has approved of the appointment of Princess Mary to be Colonel in Chief of the Royal Scots, (Lothian Regiment.) The regiment, which has a splendid military record, is the oldest in the British Army, and in reference to its claims to antiquity it has been humorously styled "Pontius Pilate's Bodyguards." Although the first name it bears on its colors is that of the victory of Blenheim, in 1704, it existed for at least a century before that date.

Other royal Colonels in Chief are the Queen, 18th Hussars; Queen Alexandra, 19th Hussars; the Princess Royal, 7th Dragoon Guards; Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders; and Princess Patricia, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

CECIL LAUDS W. H. PAGE.

Pays High Tribute to Retiring American Ambassador.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The first public tribute to retiring American Ambassador Page apart from the official notice issued on behalf of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs was made yesterday by Lord Robert Cecil at a dinner of the Allied Maritime Transport Committee. Parliament not being in session, this function provided the earliest opportunity possible for a statement of the kind.

The Assistant Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs described Walter Hines Page as a great man and a great Ambassador, and spoke movingly of his sense of personal loss. He said that while Mr. Page was first and foremost a good American, he had, even in most difficult moments, shown himself a good friend of Britain.

Lord Cecil compared his own position as Minister of Blockade to that of a man who had to tread a narrow path with a precipice on one side and an abyss on the other. Mr. Page, he said, had by his unerring sense and perception of the true relations between America and Britain helped him to so direct his footsteps that he neither walked into the abyss on the one side nor suffered too grievously from shocks against rocky protuberances on the other. Mr. Page was a good fellow and great Ambassador, concluded Lord Cecil, a good American and a good friend of the Allies.

DENIES ALLIANCE REPORT.

No Secret Deal Between England and America, Senator Lewis Says.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—There has been no proposal by England and no suggestion in America for a political or military alliance between the two countries, said James Hamilton Lewis, United States Senator from Illinois, who spoke at the American Luncheon Club here today. Mr. Lewis was the honored guest at the luncheon and appeared on the speaking program with Lord Reading, the British Ambassador to the United States.

"I join with you," said Mr. Lewis, turning to Lord Reading, "in the sentiments expressed in the speech recently made by you asserting that mischievous propaganda had been circulated in certain parts of the country for the purpose of embarrassing the Allies. There has been no proposal from England for a political or military alliance with the United States, and there has been no suggestion in America for any such convention with England or any other foreign country in connection with the war as the fruit thereof.

"If there shall arise any circumstance justifying different relations than those now existing, President Woodrow Wilson and Premier David Lloyd George will send the proposal and the reasons offered for it to the peoples of the countries. There will be no diplomatic juggling of the fates. There will be no burden to any people through secret pacts made by official agents as long as Woodrow Wilson is President of the United States and a democratic Government is in force in Great Britain."

COMMENDED BY DANIELS.

New York Sailors Among Those Mentioned for Heroic Acts.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Six seamen were commended today by Secretary Daniels for acts of heroism.

Alonzo E. Seright, pharmacist's mate, 1,014 Orville Street, Kansas City, Kan., rescued Private T. T. Smith, marines, who fell overboard while petrolizing mosquito breeding areas near Scott Island, diving repeatedly before he succeeded in locating Smith in fifteen feet of water, partially imbedded in the mud.

Adam J. Bettinger, boatswain's mate, 14 Judge Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Ernest L. Pemberton, seaman, 1,188 Whitney Street, New Haven, Conn., made a gallant attempt to rescue a sailor who fell overboard from a British ship.

Otto A. Valfer, yeoman, 333 East Seventy-ninth Street, New York, rescued a woman bather at Howard Beach, Long Island.

Louis Friedman, seaman, Twenty-ninth and Montana Avenues, San Francisco, jumped overboard with all his clothes on in a strong tide and rescued a man.

Frederick L. Cook, electrician, New Orleans, La., was commended for devotion to duty when the motor schooner Madrugada was sunk by an enemy submarine on Aug. 15. He stayed at his post under fire after all hands had left, sending out S O S calls, finally jumping overboard to reach one of the small boats.

NEED PERMIT TO GO ABROAD.

Immigration Authorities Alone Can Give Permission to Travelers.

In order that there shall be no chance for a spy to leave the United States with information that might be useful to the enemy, and to stop people traveling for pleasure during wartime, the State Department has issued an order that on and after Sept. 15 no person shall leave the country without obtaining a permit from the immigration authorities. This will include every country outside the United States except Canada and Mexico. Intending passengers will have to obtain their passports and visés in the regular manner before applying to the immigration authorities, who will open a special office in the Barge Office at the Battery.

Says du Pont Was Misquoted.

Philip Kobbé, President of the Allied Industries Corporation, sent out a letter yesterday commenting upon "a statement by Richard M. Hurd, President of the American Defense Society, criticising Alfred I. du Pont for a statement attributed to him to the effect that the country would trade fully with Germany after the war." Mr. Kobbé wrote that although he was "not authorized to speak for Mr. du Pont" he "was within hearing when Mr. du Pont commented on this subject, and I am in a position to say that he was misquoted."

SCHOENECK LOYAL, ROOSEVELT SAYS

Colonel Is Satisfied of the Candidate's "Thoroughgoing Americanism."

COCKS SEES LEWIS FAILURE

Whitman's Manager Says Attorney General Did Not Arouse Enthusiasm at His Meetings.

Ex-Congressman William W. Cocks, campaign manager for Governor Whitman, made public last night a letter from Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, in which the Colonel expressed himself as quite satisfied of Lieut. Gov. Edward Schoeneck's "entire loyalty and thoroughgoing Americanism." Schoeneck, who is a candidate for renomination, had been assailed as a result of activities with the case of John A. Tolishus, a clerk in his law office, who since has been indicted for disloyalty and sedition on a number of counts. Here is the Colonel's letter:

Sagamore Hill, Aug. 30, 1918.

Dear Mr. Cocks: In the matter of the accusations of disloyalty made against Mr. Schoeneck, you submit to me statements showing that the presence of Mr. Schoeneck before Judge Ray in the Tolishus case was by invitation of the United States District Attorney who was trying the case, and showing that Judge Ray states that the conduct of Mr. Schoeneck was proper in every respect; these statements therefore seem to show that Mr. Schoeneck acted only on invitation of the Department of Justice, and that the Judge affirms the entire propriety of his conduct.

You also tell me that Mr. Schoeneck "took the position publicly and privately that this country should have declared war at the time of the sinking of the Lusitania." This I regard as most important. If the "acid test" of loyalty can itself be tested by conduct in any one instance, the sinking of the Lusitania affords that instance, and the persons who immediately demanded immediate action against Germany when the Lusitania was sunk are those most entitled to be regarded as having stood the acid test in best shape.

Senator Robinson informed me that Mr. Schoeneck was of more aid than any other one man in securing the passage of the bill repealing the charter of the German-American Alliance, and that his Americanism cannot in any way be questioned. I of course know nothing of the facts at first hand, and I am not taking sides in the contest for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor one way or the other. But in view of the facts you put before me, and of the statements you make of your own personal knowledge, there can be no question of Mr. Schoeneck's entire loyalty and thoroughgoing Americanism.

Yours truly,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Mr. Cocks pronounced the campaign of Mr. Lewis in this city a failure on the strength of reports he said he had received regarding three meetings the Attorney General addressed on Thursday night in the Ninth, Twenty-second, and Twenty-third Assembly Districts in Manhattan. This territory is regarded by friends of Mr. Lewis as the "enemy's country."

"At the Twenty-third Assembly District meeting," Mr. Cocks said, "there were nineteen men and eight women present, exclusive of Mr. Lewis and his campaign managers. Five hundred invitations had been sent out. In response to 400 invitations sent out, forty persons appeared at his meeting in the Twenty-second Assembly District. I have been advised that there was no interest displayed at the meetings."

Mr. Cocks quoted letters he had received from St. Lawrence, Clinton, and Cayuga Counties to indicate that all the Republican sentiment in those localities favored Governor Whitman.

"Government by proxy" was assailed by Attorney General Lewis at an address before Brooklyn Republicans at Congress Hall, Atlantic and Vermont Avenues. The audience was composed largely of members of the Republican organization in the Twenty-second Assembly District of Kings, of which Jacob A. Livingston, chieftain of the Republican forces in Kings, is the leader.

In reply to a question embodied in a questionnaire submitted by Miss Elizabeth Tyron, Chairman of the Women Voters' Committee of the Hudson River counties, Mr. Lewis yesterday pledged himself to support openly and without reservation the ticket that wins in the Republican primaries on Tuesday.

FESS FOR WOODS'S PLACE.

Ohio Man Chosen for Chairman, but Demands Harmony Pledge.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Representative Simeon D. Fess of Ohio was elected Chairman of the Republican National Congressional Committee tonight to succeed Representative Frank P. Woods. Mr. Woods retired after having been defeated for renomination because of his anti-war record. Mr. Fess was the unanimous choice of the meeting.

Before indicating whether he will assume the Chairmanship Mr. Fess will consult with members of the party.

"I believe the Republicans can carry the next House of Representatives if there is a united campaign and a sane one," Mr. Fess said tonight.

PROHIBITION VOTE DELAYED

Opposition to Various Appropriations Holds Up the Measure.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Opposition to various appropriations attacked as wasteful and unnecessary, together with protracted debate on the conference report to the Man Power bill, resulted in the failure of the Senate today to pass the Emergency Agricultural Appropriation bill with its amendment providing for national prohibition after June 30, 1919. Prohibition leaders expect a final vote tomorrow.

Discussion of minor appropriations in the $11,000,000 measure occupied most of the Senate's time, Senators contending that much of the money could be devoted to better purposes in the prosecution of the war. An amendment authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to set aside $2,500,000 for the purchase of seed wheat to be sold to farmers was adopted.

WILSON VISITS LANSING

But Purpose of Conference at State Department Is Not Disclosed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—President Wilson walked to the State Department this afternoon for a conference of half an hour with Secretary Lansing. Nothing was disclosed after the conference regarding its purpose or the matters taken under consideration.

Whether the matters considered related to the appointment of a new Ambassador to England in place of Walter Hines Page or to the Russian situation, including the Siberian question and the economic commission to Russia, the personnel of which is believed to have been virtually selected, is wholly a matter of speculation.

BROKERS' WIRES GOING UP.

Commerce Board Holds That Special Rates Have Been Too Low.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Charges now made for private telegraph wire services of bankers, brokers, and industrial concerns on the theory of wholesale business were declared unreasonably low today by the Interstate Commerce Commission. No formal order was issued because the Government has taken over the telegraph services since the case came up, but the decision said a revision of rates should be considered. Leased wires of railroads and the press are not affected, the commission holding that these are quasi public services and not to be classed with strictly commercial business.

LONDON POLICEMEN STRIKE FOR MORE PAY

10,000 "Bobbies" Quit Work, Leaving Greater Part of District Unprotected.

SMUTS TRIES TO INTERVENE

But Strikers Decide He Is Unqualified to Settle Dispute—Their Action Called Mutinous.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The police of the London metropolitan district, embracing an area of 700 square miles and a population of 8,000,000, went on a strike today for more pay. The "City," comprised within an area of a little more than one square mile and which has its own police force, is not yet affected by the strike.

The strength of London's police force is about 22,000. According to the union leaders, 10,000 of these were out at noon today, and the greater proportion of the remainder had shown themselves in entire sympathy with the movement.

General Smuts of South Africa, a member of the Imperial War Cabinet, intervened in an attempt to settle the trouble, and met a committee of the strikers at the Home Office this afternoon. The strike committee decided that General Smuts was not qualified to decide the matter and the striking policemen proceeded to Tower Hill in the City where a great demonstration was organized.

The strike came with startling suddenness to Londoners, although the agitation for increased pay had been going on steadily among the police for more than a year without results, although it generally had the support of the public. The call for a strike was issued at midnight and men at every station except four refused to go on duty.

The metropolitan police demand increased wages, recognition of their union, and the reinstatement of a discharged man who was active in the policemen's union. According to the Central News the authorities offered to reinstate the discharged constable with a reprimand, but the union objected and the demand was granted.

Police Are Poorly Paid.

One of the union leaders stated today that the present pay of London policemen is 38 shillings weekly, plus 12 shillings war bonus, and the possible addition of 2 shillings weekly after twenty-one years' service. Sergeants receive 10 shillings more weekly than the patrolmen.

The chief effect of the strike today was felt in the traffic centres. All the big financial houses and banks have their own private guards, while the big Government buildings and important official centres either are similarly provided or are under military patrol. The financial district of London is all within the old city.

Later in the day when the traffic became thicker the regular traffic constables were sadly missed. Vehicles became blocked at many of the busiest centres, while accidents were not infrequent as the result of old women and children attempting to cross the streets without the help of guardians.

A high Scotland Yard official is quoted by the Pall Mall Gazette as saying:

"We take a very serious view, indeed, of the men's action. They are not striking. They are mutinying in the face of the enemy. The police are a disciplined force, which has been exempted from the military service to protect capital and property. It is a quasi-military force, and in mutinying the men are breaking one of our lines of defense and compelling us to gather together a scratch force."

There was an effort today to mobilize enough of the semi-civilian special constables to handle the work of the regular police, but this effort did not succeed very well because the specials generally sympathized with the demands made by the regulars, and managed to avoid receiving the calls to duty. Headquarters at Scotland Yard announced at 2 o'clock this afternoon that a "certain number of police officers refused to come on duty today, but steps have been taken to deal with the situation." Regarding the men's demands, the statement said: "The question of an increase was under consideration when the present developments came."

Closing Day at Children's Centre.

Dances and songs and other exercises marked the closing yesterday of the All-Day Children's Centre at Public School 3, Hudson and Grove Streets, which, however, will be reopened next Tuesday at Greenwich House, 34 Barrow Street. The centre has looked after an average of 110 children a day during the Summer while the mothers, many of them obliged to go out to work because of war conditions, were away. Now that the school will be used for its regular work the Settlement in Barrow Street has taken the centre and, with the children connected with it, the number will be augmented to 200.

NOTICE

The athletic games for the benefit of the Camp Vail Athletic Fund, to be held on the Horse Show Grounds, Long Branch, had been arranged before any request had been made to the public regarding the saving of gasoline for motoring on Sunday.

Up to the present time no orders have been received by the military authorities regarding the gasoline question. As this is a benefit for the soldiers of Camp Vail, it is requested that the public attend, as it is not believed that the request of the Fuel Administrator should interfere with such an undertaking. Also the Fuel Administration in Washington says that the order is not intended to prohibit reasonable use of gasoline.

flight before an army of I. W. W.'s was an important factor in the trial, received sentences of five years each.

For more than an hour Judge Landis read excerpts from Haywood's correspondence relative to opposition to the war.

"In light of the evidence before it, the jury had no avenue of escape from a verdict of guilty," the court said.

"I don't mean," said Judge Landis at another point in his statement, "that the I. W. W. started out deliberately to aid Germany." He added that their acts were an aid to the enemy and were aimed directly at their own country.

Some of the defendants chuckled as sentence was pronounced, others paled and swayed uncertainly, while still others tried to make their way to wives and other relatives.

Benjamin Fletcher of Philadelphia, the only colored member on trial, grinned broadly when he was sentenced to serve ten years. He was being led away when he remarked:

"Judge Landis is using poor English today. His sentences are too long."

The first two of the ninety-five defendants who were sentenced were Meyer Friedkin of Denver and Glen Roberts of Fresno, Cal., each of whom received a term of ten days' imprisonment in the county jail on each of the four counts in the indictments.

The following were sentenced to serve one year and one day in the Leavenworth Penitentiary, fined $5,000 each on the first and second counts and $10,000 each on the third and fourth counts:

Fred Nelson, Rockford, Ill.; Roy A. Brown, Seattle; Walter Smith, Bellingham, Wash; George Hardy, Seattle; Charles Jacobson, Duluth, Minn.; J. R. Baskett, Jerome, Ariz.; Ray Cordes, Pittsburgh; Anson E. Soper, Astoria, Ore.; George Speed, San Francisco; Charles McWhirt, Redding, Cal., and Charles Jacobs, Denver.

Those sentenced with Haywood to serve twenty years in the penitentiary and to pay $20,000 fine were:

Carl Ahlteen, Minneapolis; George Andreytchine, Chicago; Forrest Edwards, Minneapolis; Ralph Chaplin, Chicago; Leo Laukki, Duluth; Aurelio V. Azuara, Los Angeles; G. L. Lambert, Minneapolis; Vladimir Lossieff, Chicago; Walter T. Neff, Philadelphia; Charles Rothfisher, Chicago; James Rowan, Spokane, Wash; Sam Scarlett, Akron, Ohio; Manuel Rey, Buffalo, and Richard Brazier, Spokane.

The next batch of men received sentences of five years in prison and fined $5,000 on each of the four counts. They were:

Arthur Boose, Tulsa, Okla.; Tex Fraser, Minneapolis; J. T. Doran, Tacoma, Wash.; John M. Foss, Seattle; C. R. Griffin, Seattle; William Tanner, Chicago; Frank Westerlund, Duluth, Minn.; Ray S. Fanning, Cambridge, Mass.; Harrison George, Pittsburgh; Clyde Huff, Rockford, Ill.; Harry Lloyd, Portland, Ore.; Charles H. McKinnon, Salt Lake City; Peter McEvoy, San José, Cal.; Louis Parenti, San Francisco; James Phillips, Los Angeles; Charles Plahn, Chicago; V. V. O'Hare, Leadville, Col.; Herbert Mahler, Chicago; Joe Graber, Scranton, Penn.; M. Levine, Seattle; Olin B. Anderson, Eureka, Mon.; James Elliott, Los Angeles; W. H. Lewis, Globe, Ariz.; James H. Manning, Fresno, Cal.; Joseph McCarthy, Minneapolis, and E. J. McCosham, Phoenix, Ariz.

The following were sentenced to serve six years in prison and fined $5,000 on the first count; on the second count, ten years' imprisonment and $5,000 fine; on the third count, two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine; on the fourth count, ten years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine, sentences to run concurrently:

C. W. Davis, Spokane; J. H. Byers, Portland; C. H. Rice, Portland; John I. Turner, Spokane; Albert B. Prashner, Scranton, Penn.; John Martin, Spokane; Fred Jaakkola, Duluth; Joseph J. Gordon, Chicago; Ragnar Johanson, Chicago; Charles Ashleigh, San Francisco; G. J. Bourg, Minneapolis; Stanley J. Clark, Jacksonville, Texas; Alexander Cournos, Huron, S. D.; Edward F. Doree, Philadelphia; Ben Fletcher, Philadelphia; Jack Law, Pittsburgh; Burt Lorton, Chicago; J. A. McDonald, Seattle; Francis Miller, Providence; Grover H. INTERBOROUGH PAY WILL BE INCREASED

New Wage Scale to be Settled at a Joint Conference Next Week.

15,000 WILL BE AFFECTED

More Than 10 Per Cent. Will Be Added to the Present Payroll of $10,000,000.

There will be a joint conference early next week, probably on Tuesday, between the officials of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and representatives of its employes to readjust the wage scale. It was admitted by the company yesterday that a substantial increase in wages would be granted. There are about 15,000 persons employed by the company, the annual payroll at present is approximately $10,000,000, and the increase, it was estimated, would be more than 10 per cent., but probably less than 20 per cent. At any rate, the annual increase will aggregate about $1,500,000, not counting the additional employes who will be needed to operate the new lines.

The present wage scale expires on Sept. 1, and in his frequent communications with the Mayor early in the year on the subject of an increase in fares, T. P. Shonts, President of the company, stated that it would be necessary to increase wages. Employes of the company have been endeavoring to agree upon the amount of increase which would be satisfactory to all, but the matter was left in abeyance until after it could be discussed with the company. Relations between the brotherhood of employes and the company officials have always been cordial, and no fear has yet been expressed that an amicable agreement would not be reached.

The employes are divided into four divisions: transportation, which is by far the largest; equipment, engineering, and motive power. The office force consists of nearly 600, and the wages of these will be increased in the same proportion as the other employes.

Last year the total earnings of the company aggregated about $40,000,000, and the payroll was 25 per cent. of this amount. In order to cover the increased wage scale and to leave the net earnings undisturbed, the company will have to earn during the next twelve months approximately $6,000,000 more.

It was not thought likely that the coming increase in wages would have the result of retaining men who may be tempted by the high wages offered by concerns engaged in Government work, but it was said that it would add to the contentment of the men who appreciated the benefit of steady employment and who would not be drawn away by the prospect of higher wages for a short period.

JAMES E. MARCH DEAD.

East Side Republican Leader Made a Fortune as Labor Contractor.

James E. March, rated as a millionaire, for many years Republican leader in the Second Assembly District, who prior to his affiliation with the Republican Party won recognition in Tammany Hall, died yesterday morning from pneumonia in his home, 235 Lafayette Street. Mr. March was 58 years old and came to this country as an immigrant when 12 years old.

Mr. March's real name was Antonio Maggio and he was born at Albano de Lucania, Province of Potenza, Italy. He started life as a helper on a milk route in New York City, later going with the Erie Railroad as an usher. This was about the time the Italian immigration rush to the United States started and his nativity and language made him very valuable to the road. Promoted from one position to another he finally became the company's labor contractor, in which position he placed thousands of his countrymen in jobs with the railroad.

Entering politics he was first affiliated with Tammany Hall, but there came a break in a furious campaign and he flopped over to the Republican Party, where he remained the rest of his life.

He served at Port Warden under appointment by Governor Roosevelt.

PROF. S. W. WILLISTON DEAD

Noted Scientist Was Dean of Palaeontology of Chicago University.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Professor Samuel Wendell Williston, Dean of Palaeontology of the University of Chicago and one of the foremost scientists of the country, died today from cancer of the stomach. His illness followed his heading a corps of scientists to Texas, where extended exploration work was accomplished in the fossil fields of that State.

Dean Williston left uncompleted on his deathbed his last scientific work, a volume on water reptiles of the past and present upon which he was engaged. He has been known for years internationally as the world's foremost authority on the two winged fly, his "Key to the Diptera" being the world's textbook on that subject. His scientific works extended beyond 190 volumes and his collections of flies and fossil reptiles extended into the millions. Professor Williston was 66 years old.

SAY ENGLISH FLOTILLA ON DVINA HAS RETIRED

Bolsheviki Also Report Advance of Reds on Other Fronts Against Czech Forces.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The London Daily News publishes the following dispatch from Arthur Ransome, its pro-Bolshevist correspondent, who has left Russia and telegraphs from Stockholm under date of Aug. 29:

"The Soviet reports that, after two days' hard fighting, the English flotilla on the Dvina, south of Archangel, has retired. Moscow papers consider the doings of the Allies in the north as merely a preliminary reconnoissance.

"On the other fronts further Soviet advances against the Czechoslovaks and counter-revolutionaries are reported by Trotzky, who points out that the Allies are informed by their own agents as to the truth of the armed prisoner reports from Siberia. Hungarians, and other Socialists of the Central Empires, he says, are there fighting for the Soviets. They are small in numbers, and all know they will be hanged if captured by the Germans, as has been proved already when they fought against Germans in the Ukraine.

"Most interesting, however, are the reports from the Caucasus and Central Asia. The Socialist Government of Georgia, under the Presidency of M. Jordania, invited German help against the Soviets. Recently German officers, with General von Kress at their head, interviewed Jordania on the subject of the open hostility of the population.

"Kress said Germany had nothing against Georgia having a Socialist Government if she wanted it, and generally had no intention of interfering in Georgia's internal affairs. Jordania replied that in that case the discontent with the Germans was merely due to a misunderstanding.

"These courtesies, however, had no effect on the popular feeling against both Germans and Jordania. The discontent now has taken a violent form, and Georgia is disputed by three separate armed groups. German troops are apparently acting independently of the regular troops of the Georgian Government, and both these are opposed by the Red Guards.

"The Central Asia Soviet troops, who hold the whole Selrechensk district, have taken Mery, near the Persian frontier. Mery once rivaled Bagdad as one of the oldest cities in the world, and is the centre of an important cotton district.

"Germany's steady diplomatic advance in the southeast, encouraging now one, now another, small group to declare itself an independent nation, has the definite plan of using the Nationalist tendencies to extend German influence toward the cotton fields of the East, whereas it seems probable that Eastern Nationalism will meet its most dangerous enemy in the new political awakening of the masses.

"I hear from Moscow that the position of the Soviet has been strengthened by the easing of the food difficulties. The Educational Congress is looking cheerfully into the distant future, laying plans for the general education of the workers. The history of Socialism will be an obligatory subject, besides music, handicrafts, and physical exercises."

DON CAMERON DIES; 20 YEARS A SENATOR

Once Republican Leader of Pennsylvania, Aged 85, Spent Last Days on His Farm.

GRANT'S WAR SECRETARY

In Business He Started as Clerk in His Father's Bank—His $4,000,000 Estate in Trust.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Aug. 30.—James Donald Cameron, for twenty years United States Senator from Pennsylvania and Secretary of War from 1876 to 1877, died early today at his country home, Donegal, Lancaster County. He was stricken with paralysis three weeks ago and remained unconscious until his death.

Ex-Senator Cameron retired from active business several years ago, placing his property valued at $4,000,000 in trust, and had been residing in the Summer at his Lancaster County farm, spending the Winters in his houseboat off the South Carolina coast.

He was born in Middletown, Penn., May 14, 1833, and was graduated from Princeton College in the class of 1852. His business career began as soon as he left Princeton, when he became a clerk in a bank at Middletown, of which his father, United States Senator Simon Cameron, was President, later becoming cashier and President when it became the National Bank of Middletown. Removing to Harrisburg, he became interested in the First National Bank of Harrisburg, and soon afterward purchased from his father the farm on the Susquehanna River, where he made his home for many years. He was also interested in railroads.

In his public career he was Secretary of War in President Grant's Cabinet from May 22, 1876, to March 3, 1877, when he succeeded his father, Simon Cameron, in the United States Senate, of which he was a member until March 3, 1897, when he declined to make the fight for re-election because of the growth in power of M. S. Quay.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular, with No New Influences Discernible—Trading Reduced.

Stocks moved rather narrowly yesterday, with the dominant influence guiding traders the approaching holiday. Considering the large number of men prominent in the financial life of the city who are away until after next Monday, the volume of business was satisfactory; it would be stretching a point to connect the reduced activity with the warning of the Money Committee of higher rates for call loans to be imposed should the market show signs of expansion to fit the improving situation in Europe. Dealings yesterday were largely supplied by the professional element to close positions. There were enough buying orders in hand at substantial recessions to check any effort in behalf of the short interest.

Selling ex dividend, Steel opened with a small overnight gain and afterward sagged off with most of the other industrials. There was a better tone in the rails, due to the expectation of the early receipt of signed copies of the modified contract, with Southern Railway particularly active and strong. The cheerful war news each day is being accepted now almost as a matter of course, although traders are bearing in mind the probability of much more obstinate resistance once the Germans reach the Hindenburg line.

Money has been hard to obtain at the published rates, but there is so far no disposition to charge more than 6 per cent. Whether that rate would long obtain were the daily transactions to evidence a widening speculative interest is exceedingly doubtful. The warning conveyed in the statement from the head of the Clearing House Association has met with such general approval among bankers that there is little question but that even a moderate increase in activity would invoke the penalty promised. The demand for loans on acceptances is broadening rapidly, and although some of the leading banks have fallen into line and are putting out funds at 4½ per cent., it is not unlikely that this rate will be advanced slightly unless the practice soon becomes general among the big institutions.

The proposal that all transactions in Liberty bonds be handled through a committee empowered to discriminate according to the nature of the orders is not likely to be accepted without a good deal of opposition, particularly in the West. The fundamental objection, already voiced, to allowing the dealers a differential of 1 per cent. is not serious, for it is expected to mark up the price of outstanding issues more than that, so that a seller could well afford to sell at a point under the offering price. It remains to be seen how bankers in other cities will accept the suggestion that the primary market supplied by the Stock Exchange be closed to them. In the past the distribution of Liberty bonds has been followed immediately by the resale of large blocks on this market by individuals and institutions that overbought for reasons of local pride.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

Excellent News from the Western Front Stimulates Trading.

LONDON, Aug. 30—The stock market opened quiet today, but later the excellent news from the western front stimulated trading, particularly in gilt edged and semi-investment securities. French 5s were very strong on the continuous rise in the value of the franc, and Russians were distinctly firmer on expectations of important developments.

Shipping stocks were active at improving quotations under the lead of Cunards. Industrial shares were also good features.

Money was in good demand and discount rates were quiet.

Prices Firm on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Aug. 30.—Prices were firm on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 63 francs 90 centimes for cash. Exchange on London 26 francs 25 centimes. Five per cent. loan 87 francs 90 centimes.

Utilities Earnings Show Decrease.

The American Public Utilities Company of Grand Rapids, Mich., reports for the year ended June 30, 1918, gross earnings of $4,452,125, compared with $3,819,821 in 1917, and a net income of $1,626,504, as against $1,688,409 last year. The surplus of $249,649 left after deduction of all charges is equivalent to $5.59 a share on $4,465,900 outstanding preferred stock, and compares with $10.05 earned the previous year.

CHEMICAL INCOME GROWS.

American Agricultural Co. Reports $11,079,956 Gross for Year.

The American Agricultural Chemical Company earned a gross income from operations of $11,079,956 in the year ended June 30, showing a gain of $2,620,160 over the preceding year. The income from all sources was $11,377,107, and the balance available for dividends totaled $8,111,018, an increase of $2,564,663. The amount from which common stock dividends could be paid was equal to $35 a share, compared with $21.11 the year before. The management carried $5,392,754 to the surplus account.

Conditions in the fertilizer business, the report issued yesterday noted, were complicated when the United States entered the war. "The requirements of our Government for nitrate of soda and sulphate of ammonia," Peter B. Bradley, President, said, "have become enormous, not only greatly enhancing the prices of these materials, but even threatening their serious shortage for agricultural purposes. Potash is being produced in limited quantities from the brines of Western lakes, alunite and other minerals, and as a by-produt from several industries, but the dearth of this material is the least of our troubles, as fertlizers have been giving satisfatory results without potash, just as they did in the early era of the industry.

"After the war we anticipate a heavy demand for Amerian phosphate rock, which all the European nations will need in large quantities owing to the long continued shortage of phosphoric acid. Germany needs our phosphates far more than America needs her potash, for phosphoric acid is by far the most essential element in the production of the grain and fruit of all crops."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Clearing House Meeting.

A meeting of the New York Clearing House Association has been called for Tuesday, Sept. 3, at 1 o'clock. The invitations state that the purpose of the gathering is "to receive a communication from the Clearing House Committee." Walter E. Frew, President of the Corn Exchange Bank, who is Chairman of this committee, declined yesterday to divulge the nature of the communication, but in banking circles it was surmised that it would probably deal with the question of collection charges on acceptances payable outside of New York City. It is understood that the Clearing House will recommend a modification of the recent ruling on the subject, the Boston banks having made vigorous protests against the charge of one-tenth of 1 per cent.

September Payments, $243,312,000.

Dividend and interest payments during the month of September will aggregate $243,312,000, according to a compilation made by The Journal of Commerce. Dividend disbursements to stockholders will amount to $82,200,000, as compared with $87,689,000 the corresponding month last year; and interest payments on bonds and notes will total $161,112,000, as against $70,000,000 in September, 1917.

Indorsing Trade Acceptances.

In the discussion of the subject of acceptances, the suggestion has repeatedly been advanced that banks indorse trade acceptances and resell them at a profit. The indorsement of a trade acceptance by a bank virtually makes the trade acceptance a banker's acceptance. New York banks and trust companies have thus far been very reluctant to indorse trade acceptances—few, if any, have done so—but it was learned yesterday that a certain dealer was offering at 4½ per cent. discount a line of trade acceptances indorsed by a Pittsburgh national bank.

New Record for Franc Exchange.

French exchange advanced further yesterday than on any preceding day of the current forward movement, at the top scoring the highest quotation since May, 1915. It was 5.45½ francs to the dollar for cable transfers, a rise of more than 4 centimes for the day. Bankers said that evidences of speculation were detected in the market, although the major factor behind the movement appeared to be an increase in the demand for remittances by soldiers and others going to France. Attention was drawn to the market for Italian exchange by an order sent to bankers by Fred I. Kent, Director of the Federal Reserve Boads's Division of Foreign Exchange, notifying them that dealers in lire were prohibited from buying or selling Italian exchange outside of the country without first receiving authority from the Reserve Board. The original provision in respect to this market covered only the buying of lire exchange outside the United States.

Steel Steady "ex" the Dividend.

Opening at 110½, Steel common, selling "ex dividend" yesterday, showed a gain of one-quarter of a point over the close the day before. The final quotation displayed a net decline of only the smallest fraction, thereby upsetting the calculations of traders who sold the stock short when the market was weak on Thursday, hoping that the removal of the big dividend would tend to depress the shares sharply.

An Order for Liberty Bonds.

Varying commission rates are charged by brokers for buying and selling Liberty bonds, and those who make nominal charges state that there is no profit in the business. On the contrary, losses are frequently sustained in the handling of sizable amounts. A bond man, who is not a member of the Stock Exchange, outlined yesterday a transaction which he recently put through, in this way: He received an order from a Western bank to buy $40,000 Liberty 4¼s. The order came by telegraph, collect. He bought the bonds on the Exchange through an Exchange member, the total commission being thirty cents per $1,000, of which he received 10 cents, or $4 for the block. He confirmed the purchase by telegraph, paying the bill and also the bill for the purchasing order, the two amounting to about $2. He insured the bonds when they were mailed, and sent them by registered mail, the cost being approximately $4. So, on an order which brought a $4 commission he had $6 expenses. Furthermore, he had to use his own capital to pay for the bonds and carry them until the bank sent on a check. In making out his bill, the broker charged the bank interest at 4¼ per cent., the same as the interest on the bonds, and at the same time was paying 6 per cent. for money which he borrowed in the call market that day.

CONVERTING LIBERTY 4S.

Time Limit for This Privilege Is to End on Nov. 9.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Secretary McAdoo issued a statement today calling attention to the privilege that holders of 4 per cent. Liberty Bonds of the First Loan have of converting them into 4¼ per cent. bonds. This privilege expires on Nov. 9, and under existing law cannot be extended or renewed. To delay to the last moment endangers the possibility of making the conversion at all, as the banks will in all probability be loaded down with business during the period that these conversions can be made.

"Holders of these 4 per cent. bonds lose nothing by exercising the privilege of conversion and gain ¼ per cent. interest per annum," said Mr. McAdoo. "Holders of coupon bonds are strongly advised to request issue of registered bonds in order to protect themselves against the risk of loss, theft, and destruction of their bonds.

"Official Department Circular No. 114, with forms of application, has been distributed to Federal Reserve banks and banks and trust companies throughout the United States. These institutions are asked, as a matter of patriotic service, to assist bondholders in exchanging 4 per cent. bonds for 4¼ per cent. bonds and in registering their bonds."

URGES PREPARATION FOR NEW LOAN DRIVE

Governor Strong of Reserve Bank Appeals to Institutions of This District.

ASKS EARLY APPROPRIATION

Suggests Filing Subscriptions Through Banks Carrying Funds to be Used for Payments.

Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, has sent out a letter to banks and trust companies in this district advising them of the forthcoming Fourth Liberty Loan, which he says will probably be for $6,000,000,000, and suggesting that large individual and corporate investors be urged to make advance preparations for liberal subscriptions.

Mr. Strong says that, based on the Government's expenditures during recent months and the ratio of increase shown over the earlier months of the year, there seems no reason to doubt that by the end of this year the country's expenditures will have reached the enormous monthly total of more than $2,000,000,000. After pointing out that the next loan would probably be $6,000,000,000, Governor Strong says:

"In view of this situation it seems necessary for us to ask all large investors to begin to make their preparation in advance if possible, so that their subscriptions to the Fourth Liberty Loan may be as large as circumstances will permit. I am therefore writing to ask if the corporations which will be called upon to furnish a substantial part of the next Liberty Loan will not consider a program somewhat as follows:

1. Make an absolute appropriation out of expected income of such amount as may be available; in fact, the largest amount which circumstances will permit, for investment in the Fourth Liberty Loan.

2. Pending the offering of the Fourth Liberty Loan, invest surplus income as it accrues in Treasury certificates of indebtedness bearing 4½ per cent. interest, with a view of converting the certificates into bonds of the Fourth Loan. These can be purchased at your bank.

These certificates of indebtedness may be used in making payments for the Liberty Loan bonds for which you subscribe. In case you are uncertain as to the amount of taxes which you will be called upon to pay following enactment of the new tax bill, it may be borne in mind that the terms of this bill may be signed before the next issue of bonds is made, and, to the extent that additional reservations of income are required, they, in turn, may be invested in certificates to be issued this month, which can be used in making payment for income and excess profits taxes, and the maturity of which will be adjusted for that purpose.

3. Comply with the recommendations of the Treasury Department as to filing their subscriptions through the banks, in which funds are carried, which will be used in making payment for the bonds.

"The third item is of more importance than is generally realized. In connection with the Third Liberty Loan a very large amount of money was transferred from New York to other Federal Reserve districts in order to make payments for bonds subscribed in those districts out of funds customarily carried by the subscribers in New York City banks. In view of the fact that the quota assigned to the New York district is based in large part upon deposits, including those so transferred, the burden actually thrown upon the subscribers in the Second Federal Reserve District is made heavier than is intended in the allocation of the quotas among the Federal Reserve districts. Furthermore, it places an immense burden upon the New York money market, to the detriment of those who need to have recourse to it from time to time.

"In making this suggestion at the present time I am actuated by the hope that the corporations will begin to make preparations for the next loan at an early date and will handle the matter in such a way as will minimize the disturbances in the money market, and will comply with the recommendations of the Secretary of the Treasury as to the method of filing subscriptions."

COTTON PRICES FALL IN IRREGULAR MARKET

Break Shows Decline of 125 to 140 Points from High Record Established on Thursday.

The cotton market yesterday was for the most part irregular and unsettled. Opening quotations showed a decline of 45 to 82 points and there was heavy liquidation. Liverpool was a seller and there was scattered hedging from Southern merchants. The Journal of Commerce report showing a condition of 60 was regarded as bearish and induced considerable selling. The break in prices showed a decline of 125 to 140 points from the high records established on Thursday. Part of the morning's loss was recovered in the afternoon, but the volume of trading was small. The market closed barely steady, quotations for October and December contracts being 56 points under the previous day's final figures, while the net decline for March and July deliveries amounted to 60 points.

The New York and New Orleans Cotton Exchanges will be closed today and Monday. The Government crop report is expected at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning.

TAX BILL COMPLETE; M'ADOO OVERRULED

Committee Stands Firm on Profits Impost and Secretary Waives Other Points.

GOES TO HOUSE NEXT WEEK

Normal Levy on Incomes of Over $4,000 to be 12 Per Cent.—Exemptions $1,000 and $2,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—In a conference between Secretary McAdoo and the House Ways and Means Committee today practical agreement was reached on the vital sections of the War Revenue bill, and the measure—the largest tax bill in the history of any nation—has been finished, except for final reading and textual corrections.

It was originally estimated of the $24,000,000,000 necessary for war expenditures in the next fiscal year, one-third, or $8,000,000,000, should be raised by a tax bill doubling and in some instances tripling the rates in the present revenue law.

It was estimated tonight by Chairman Kitchin, whose committee has been drafting the measure, that the present bill, if enacted into law, would bring into the Treasury more than $8,200,000,000, chiefly by taxing those who had made money from the war and without imposing consumption taxes on breakfast table necessities.

The bill, as it will be reported to the House on Monday or Tuesday, does not have the entire approval of Secretary McAdoo. He is opposed to the war profits section containing the alternative excess profits tax beginning with a tax of 35 per cent. and running as high as 70 per cent. The Treasury officials, Mr. Kitchin said, did not agree with the 18 per cent. income tax on corporations with an abatement of 6 per cent. for distributed dividends. In all other respects the revenue collecting officials and the revenue framing committee of the House are in accord.

May Cripple Business.

The bill departs radically from the Treasury Department's recommendations in respect to war profits in that the rates are much higher than desired by the Treasury officials, and therefore are declared to be oppressive on small business, and, in the opinion of some, may have a tendency to cripple business.

As agreed to by the committee today, the war profits section, estimated to raise $3,200,000,000, imposes an 80 per cent. war profit tax, and provides for an alternative excess profit tax. There is an exemption of $3,000, plus 8 per cent. of the invested capital, after which these rates are proposed to be levied:

On income exceeding the exemptions and not exceeding 15 per cent. of invested capital, a tax of 35 per cent.;

On incomes exceeding 15 per cent. and not exceeding 20 per cent. of invested capital, a tax of 50 per cent.;

On income exceeding 20 per cent. of invested capital, a tax of 70 per cent.

Secretary McAdoo recommended the 80 per cent. war tax and an alternative tax, the same as the present excess profit tax, with rates ranging from 20 to 60 per cent.

After determining that the difficulties of administration would be very great, Secretary McAdoo agreed to abandon his plan for placing a heavier normal tax on unearned incomes than on earned ones. He insisted originally that the tax on unearned incomes should be 15 per cent., and on earned ones, 13 per cent. In the conference today he agreed that the normal tax on all incomes should be 12 per cent.

This means that there will be a 12 per cent. normal tax on all incomes over $4,000, and the tax on incomes below that amount down to the exemption figure of 6 per cent. The present normal tax is 4 per cent. The exemption in the bill is the same as in the present law, $1,000 for single and $2,000 for married persons.

Full Agreement, Says Kitchin.

After the conference between Representatives Kitchin, Garner, Longworth, and Fordney, and Secretary McAdoo, the Ways and Means Committee was reconvened, and within a few hours it was announced that all points in dispute had been adjusted and the bill completed, except for slight textual corrections. Chairman Kitchin expressed the hope that the House would accept the bill without material changes.

"We have practically finished the bill," he said, "except the final reading for corrections and a few textual changes. The Treasury Department and the Ways and Means Committee have gotten together absolutely and satisfactorily on a normal tax on incomes which will be 12 and 6 per cent.—6 per cent. below $4,000 a year down to the exemption limit and 12 per cent. above $4,000. By reason of the split normal, and the many differences and complexities in administering the differentiated earned and unearned income tax plan, and the many questions which would arise under an earned and unearned income tax plan, all agreed that it is wiser to make no differential.

"The surtaxes will be adjusted correspondingly with this 12 per cent. flat normal tax plan. All these surtaxes, of course, will be correspondingly reduced because of the change in the normal. The higher brackets, which will be substantially reduced, are the $200,000-$300,000, $300,000-$500,000, $500,000-$1,000,000, $1,000,000-$5,000,000, and all above $5,000,000. The last bracket will not exceed 65 per cent. surtax, which with the normal tax added will make a maximum income tax of 77 per cent.

Surtax Changes Yet to be Made.

"The maximum surtax of 65 per cent. on incomes compares with the maximum surtax of 63 per cent. under the present law, or 67 per cent., including the normal, or a maximum now agreed to of 77 per cent., normal and surtax, against 67, normal and surtax, in the present law. The surtax changes cannot be given out now because we will have to figure them out to correspond with what we agreed to today.

"This plan as agreed to will produce substantially the same revenue as under the 10 per cent. normal tax heretofore planned by the committee. In other words, with a 12 per cent. normal tax and the surtaxes changed from the rates heretofore tentatively in the bill, the new plan will produce substantially the same income as 10 per cent. would have with the higher surtaxes that had been planned. This 12 and 6 per cent. normal is against 4 and 2 per cent. normal under the present law—2 per cent. on incomes between $2,000 and $4,000 annually and 4 per cent. on all above $4,000.

"The committee struck out the provision under which it had been proposed that all corporations having a capital stock of $1,000,000 or more shall pay at least 10 per cent. of their net income as an excess profits tax, even though the net income does not amount to 10 per cent. It was felt that this clause might hit a number of corporations with legitimate capital. Most of those that the 10 per cent. clause would have struck will be hit by the excess profits tax with its 8 per cent. deduction.

"The excess profits tax alternative stands, as heretofore placed in the bill, with the rates 35, 50, and 70 per cent. The war profits tax stands at 80 per cent. flat.

Harmony at Conference.

"Our conference with Secretary McAdoo was pleasant, harmonious, and satisfactory. There were present Secretary McAdoo, Assistant Secretary Leffingwell, Mr. Cooksey, assistant to the Secretary, and Dr. T. S. Adams, Chairman of the Treasury Excess Profits Advisory Board, and Representatives Fordney, Garner, Longworth, and myself."

It was explained by members of the committee that the Senate's prohibition amendment, which is to take effect on July 1, 1919, would not affect the present fiscal year, but that taking the twelve months period as a basis, with the revenue law going into effect on Nov. 1, the prohibition amendment would cut off $350,000,000 as the four months proportion—July, August, September, and October—of the $1,100,000,000 estimated to be produced from the beverage schedule for the twelve months' period.

Revenue Taxes Doubled.

Virtually all the taxes in the present revenue laws are doubled and in some instances tripled. There are no new taxes except a luxury tax patterned after the English and French systems, and a tax on users of automobiles. This tax is in the form of a Federal license, based on horse power, and is expected to raise $70,000,000. The automobile taxes follow:

Motor cycles, $5.

Automobiles or electrics, 23 horse power or less, $10. Over 23 horse power and not over 30 horse power, $20; over 30 horse power and not over 40 horse power, $30; over 40 horse power, $50.

The tax on all travel tickets, railroad or boat, is increased to 5 per cent. There is an extra tax of 8 per cent. on Pullman tickets.

A tax of 5 cents on telephone charges between 14 and 50 cents, and a tax of 10 cents on telephone charges between 50 cents and $1 is proposed.

Perfumery imported into the United States will be taxed $3.30 a gallon.

The tax on club dues and admission to theatres, now 10 per cent., is increased to 20 per cent.

If the House is in session on Monday, Labor Day, Mr. Kitchin thinks that he will be able to report the bill then. If there is no session that day the bill will be reported on Tuesday and taken up on Thursday. The present plan of Chairman Kitchin is to ask for ten days' debate in the House.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

Commenting on the condition of trade and the business of the banks, Dun's Review says:

> The demands upon some of the nation's leading industries have been enlarged and rendered more urgent by the aggressive allied military offensive, and ordinary business is being promptly set aside whenever and wherever the occasion requires it. With a clearer and more general perception of the importance of retrenchment in private enterprise, there is a growing disposition to confine strictly commercial engagements within the closest possible limits, and the renewed urging of credit conservation affords another illustration of the extraordinary circumstances of the period.
> Unusually heavy payments through the banks and active business throughout the country continue to be reflected by Clearing House transactions, total exchanges this week at the principal cities of the United States amounting to $5,517,728,652, the largest ever reported for this period.

Bradstreet's says:

> The broad tendency is to buy goods only as needs require, there being enough uncertainty ahead to cause chariness. Of course, some sections are more cheerful than others, the South, Northwest, and Far West being conspicuously optimistic, and even where conservatism prevails complaints are not serious. Indeed, in the Southwest, where drought has struck hardest, the big wheat crop, activity in oil, and vigorous operations in mining afford compensatory advantages.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 9,261 packages. Higher prices established on all grades, and market very strong. Insufficient supplies and a feeling that the Government will take so much of the storage butter makes a probable shortage in sight. The firmness extends to all grades. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 48½@49c; extras, 92 score, 48; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 45½@47½c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 43@45c; thirds, 41@42½c; unsalted, higher than extras, 50@50½c; extras, 49@49½c; firsts, 47@48½c; seconds, 44½@46½c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 47@47½c; good to prime, 45@46½c; common to fair, 40@44c; renovated, extras, 42½c; firsts, 41@42c; lower grades, 38@40c; imitation creamery, firsts, 30½@40c; ladles, current make, firsts, 37½@38½c; seconds, 36@36½c; lower grades, 34½@35½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 36c; No. 2, 35½c; lower grades, 33@35c.

EGGS.—18,571 cases. The market is quieter. Dealers seem to have supplied their wants pretty well, and there is no disposition to take on any more goods than are needed over the holiday and the end of the month. The quality of the supply is showing some average improvement. Much of the stock is still defective, many lots seriously so, but in some instances there is considerable improvement in the proportion of useful eggs. The higher qualities are sustained with some firmness, but for medium and lower qualities trade is dull and tone somewhat irregular. Storage eggs are a little less active at the moment, but are generally held with confidence. Nearby white eggs quiet and offerings are liberal. Exceptionally fancy stock is inquired for and fairly steady at present prices, but slight defects make sales slow, and values are irregular and showing a wide range. Fresh gathered, extras, a dozen, 51@52c; extra firsts, 48@50c; firsts, 44@47c; seconds, 38@43c; poor to fair, 20@37c; fresh gathered, dirties, No. 1, 35@37c; No. 2 and poorer, 20@34c; fresh gathered, checks, good to choice, dry, 31@32c; under grades, 20@30c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, charges paid, 43½@44c; firsts, charges paid, 42½@43c; seconds, charges paid, 38@42c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 64@66c; ordinary to prime, 50@63c; gathered, whites, ordinary to fine, 45@63c; Pacific Coast whites, firsts to finest, 63@64c; Western and Southern, gathered, whites, 45@60c; State, Pennsylvania, and near by, hennery browns, 54@56c; gathered, brown and mixed colors, 38@52c.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Prices were steady at the close of a fairly active market yesterday. An improved demand during the afternoon made for a general betterment in values, and closing prices showed but fractional net changes for the session. There was a good inquiry for the rails, with resultant firmness in those issues.

CONSCIENCE TO LIMIT SUNDAY AUTO RIDING

Gasoline Saving Made a Matter of Personal Patriotism by Administrator Garfield.

SOME TAXICABS TO STOP

A. C. Bedford Draws Attention to Motor Uses That Are and Are Not Under the Ban.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—There will be no further definite rulings by the Fuel Administration concerning the kind of motor-driven vehicles that may be operated on Sundays. Such decisions are to be left to the public conscience.

In a short statement today, Dr. Garfield set forth the spirit which he felt should actuate the people who have been called upon to forego pleasure trips to conserve gasoline. He concluded with the statement that "the United States Fuel Administration will not attempt to tabulate automobile traffic on Sunday."

It is understood that there will be no bar against the operation of such services as New York's Fifth Avenue bus lines, and that even taxicabs will not be forbidden. In connection with the latter feature of the program the Fuel Administration believes that the public will, by avoiding all but essential traffic, solve the taxicab problem. Summing up the situation, Dr. Garfield had this to say:

"The request made by the Fuel Administration that pleasure riding be discontinued on Sundays for the present in order to conserve our supply of gasoline for war needs was not intended to prohibit reasonable use of gasoline-driven vehicles as a means of necessary transportation where no other means are available.

"I believe that the public will construe the request wisely and intelligently, and will not use their automobiles for other than the most necessary purposes. The intention of the request is that all mere pleasure riding be eliminated, but that necessary use of the automobile be not interfered with.

"Just what is 'pleasure riding' and what is 'necessary use' must be determined by the individual, keeping in mind always that we must have additional reserves of gasoline so that there may be no possibility of delays in overseas shipments.

"The United States Fuel Administration will not attempt to tabulate automobile traffic on Sunday."

The Fuel Administration is satisfied that the public, by voluntary co-operation, will reduce pleasure riding on Sundays to a minimum and make possible the large conservation of gasoline which has been predicted. If that belief proves to be justified the request may shortly be withdrawn.

SOME TAXIS WILL STOP.

Independents Will Be Idle on Sundays While Gasoline Request Stands

At a meeting of the New York Independent Taxicab Owners' Association last night at their offices, 1,547 Broadway, it was decided unanimously that the association, which controls the operation of 300 taxicabs, would observe the request of the Fuel Administration by suspending all business on Sundays until notified that the ban on the consumption of gasoline had been lifted.

J. Cassin, President of the association, said last night that the action was taken on purely patriotic grounds and that from midnight Saturday to midnight Sunday all taxicabs would be recalled from their stands and none sent out from their garages for any call whatever.

A. C. Bedford, Chairman of the National Petroleum War Service Committee, in a statement which he gave out last evening, says he feels confident that tomorrow will witness in the United States, east of the Mississippi, "a marvelous demonstration of patriotic, united purpose to do everything possible to hasten the day of victory over Germany." Then, after saying that the day would demonstrate that the users of gasoline for pleasure motoring would "hail this as an opportunity to prove, by sacrifice of a pleasure, their eagerness to back up our boys who are doing, daring and dying abroad," Mr. Bedford continues:

"I wish especially again to call attention to these words in the request of the Fuel Administration, that the people 'discontinue on Sundays, hereafter, the use of all classes of motor vehicles, motor boats and motor cycles, including such as are operated for hire.' That the practical spirit behind this request may be thoroughly understood, I also wish to call special attention to the exceptions, which are:

"'Tractors and motor trucks employed in actual transportation of freight; vehicles of physicians, used in performance of professional duties; ambulances, fire apparatus, police patrol wagons, undertakers' wagons, and conveyances used for funerals; railway equipment using gasoline; repair outfits employed by telephone and public service companies; motor vehicles on errands of necessity in rural communities where transportation by steam or electricity is not available.'

"In short, it is not the wish of the Administration to interfere with really necessary operation of gasoline-using machines. It is important, however, to remember that the request is based on military necessity. The next few weeks are the ones in which the use of gasoline for all purposes would be at its highest point.

"It is not the day upon which the saving is done; it is the saving itself which is important. The spirit of the Fuel Administration's request should appeal not only to those who ride on Sundays for pleasure, but just as much to those who use their automobiles for pleasure purposes during the week. These, too, should serve by saving. It would have been impossible to devise detailed instructions covering all possible cases. But if each one honestly asks himself, 'Am I operating my car for a necessary purpose?' the united answer will carry across the sea."

Reginald Pelham Bolton of 55 Liberty Street, who is neither the owner nor user of an automobile, and not interested in the manufacture or sale of motor vehicles, but is a constructing engineer, offered a suggestion for saving gasoline yesterday. According to Mr. Bolton few automobile owners know as much as they should about their engines. For instance, Mr. Bolton says that every new automobile is fitted with a carbureter which uses more gasoline than is needed when the car has been "shaken down" and the engine is running smoothly. After the car has been run for a while the carbureter should be adjusted so that much less gasoline will be used. This readjustment, Mr. Bolton says, is not often made. Then, too, many owners and operators of cars waste "gas" by using too "rich" a mixture of gasoline and air—that is, too much gasoline.

Therefore, Mr. Bolton suggests, let the Fuel Administration classify all cars, for the duration of the war if necessary, and allot so much gasoline, based on horse power, to each class of vehicles per week or per month. Then issue ration cards for oil as ration cards for food are issued, and check up both the buyers and sellers.

The Automobile Club of America is the authority for the statement that there are 5,500,000 automobiles in the United States, exclusive of auto trucks and buses. If each of these cars, following Mr. Bolton's suggestion, saved a quart of gasoline a day the saving would amount to 9,625,000 gallons a week, which would send a lot of tanks through German lines.

German Cigar Factories to Close.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—An official dispatch from Switzerland today says it is announced from Berlin that all of the cigar factories in Germany will be closed at the end of the year because stocks of leaf tobacco are exhausted. This measure will affect six thousand factories which are still employing 80,000 to 90,000 and which employed 220,000 in 1916.

Complains of the Telephone Service.

Many and loud are the complaints of the long-distance telephone service now being rendered in this city. Yesterday one large factor in the local woolen goods trade said that it had taken him five hours to get a connection through to a mill at Waterloo the day before. "And this is not the first time for it to happen," he continued. "Normally it takes us only a few minutes to get this mill on the telephone and, in fact, this morning the mill people got me on the wire in just five minutes. Why it should take so long from this end is a mystery to me. It would seem as though there is 'something rotten in Denmark.'"

Silk Sailor Hats for Women.

Silk sailors are mentioned as one of the particularly popular features in Fall hats for women. They are said to have been taken in quite liberal quantities by retailers of the better grades of merchandise in a great many sections of the country. Rather high crowns and narrow brims are perhaps the most generally sought proportions at present for these hats. This shape does not monopolize the field by any means, however, and, in fact, it is predicted in some quarters that they will be outdistanced in public favor later on by the wider brimmed shapes. Retailers as well as wholesalers report these hats to be in good demand with their trade.

Salesmen May Be Scarce.

The forthcoming extension of the draft ages is likely to cause a scarcity of salesmen, according to comment heard in local business circles. It was said here yesterday, for instance, that there are probably fewer married salesmen, in proportion to the number engaged in the work, than is the case in any other field of endeavor. Long trips and other enforced irregularities of a salesman's life, it was said, were not over-conducive to marriage, which is apparently to be of considerable importance when exemptions are considered. As against this, however, the assertion was made that there is hardly a class of workers that does more for mothers, sisters, and other dependents than salesmen, and that this fact is apt to increase the number of exemptions among traveling men.

Will Allot Differently.

There is a prominent mill agent in this market who is through with the idea of allotting merchandise proportionally to various customers, because there is not enough of the goods available to supply the needs of all. He was forced to do it with his line for the first time for the coming Spring season and, he says, because he tried to please all he pleased none. In almost every case where an allotment of goods was given, the buyer came back with a complaint that it was much too small and that So-and-So was getting a better deal. So many letters were of this tenor that the agent got tired of reading them. After this, he says, he will allot numbers instead of quantities. In this way he will completely fill a buyer's order for one number and give him nothing of a second, where with some other buyer the process will be reversed.

Gray Goods Sales Limited.

Several things tended to slow up trading in the local gray goods market yesterday, including the public opening here of bids for goods wanted by the Government and the apathetic effect produced by the prospect of a three-day holiday. Practically all the leading commission houses, converters, and brokers will close all day today and will not open again until Tuesday morning. Among the business put through yesterday were additional lots of prompt delivery 38½-inch 64-60s and 39-inch 68-72s at 17 and 19¼ cents, respectively. This business was done by second hands, who are now reported to be none too keen about taking further business at those figures in view of the apparent scarcity of these goods for quick shipment.

Buying Methods Must Change.

"Buying methods," said a high authority in the local retail dry goods trade yesterday, "must undergo some radical changes from former practices if the merchant is not to be swamped by present abnormal conditions. While it may be advisable to buy opening lines somewhat earlier than usual, it is equally necessary that in stocking up we provide only for the immediate future. This will, of course, involve more frequent trips to the market, but in these days of changing demand and changing merchandise values no other course can be safe. And, with traveling expenses so greatly increased, it is probable that out-of-town stores will resort more to ordering by mail than has ever been done in the past."

Black Satin in Dress Frocks.

In all lines of semi-formal and formal frocks for afternoon and evening wear, black satin holds the most conspicuous place. Other fabrics are used, and a variety of light and dark colors is in evidence, but none seems to gain the general acceptance which is accorded to black satin. It was pointed out by one authority in the trade that this material lends itself particularly well to effective draping, and that black has always been, is, and will continue to be one of the most distinctive hues for smart frocks. Sometimes quite bright colors in hand embroidery are employed for decoration, and laces and spangles also appear for this purpose, but as often as not these decorations are, like the dress, in unrelieved black.

Deliveries May Be Late.

From present indications—due to the large business being taken and the scarcity of "help"—there promises to be considerable delay in making shipments of Fall lines of women's neckwear this season. In view of this many buyers have already placed the great bulk of their business, and even the slow comers are waking up. As to the kinds of neckwear wanted, there is a considerable run on round effects, most of which show side or rear fastenings. These may be worn "round," on the order of a monk's collar, or they may be drawn down in front after the manner of the cowboy. Deep back collars with short fronts also are good. Some elaborate surplice effects are seen that drop clear to the waist. Among the favored trimmings on the new season's goods are fringes, frills, and a variety of pleats.

Coal Trade in Good Shape.

Saward's Weekly will say today that the end of Summer finds the local retail coal trade about as well satisfied with the results thus far attained in the way of making advance deliveries against Winter needs as could reasonably be expected. The amount of coal already placed in consumers' bins hereabout is greater than ever before delivered in the period running from April 1 to Aug. 31. In the four months of the coal year up to Aug. 1 total anthracite shipments showed a gain of nearly 1,000,000 tons over 1917, and while part of this increase was in the steam sizes, a substantial part of it consisted of domestic coal. Moreover, a larger percentage than usual was retained in the East under the Fuel Administration's distribution plan. Of this extra tonnage Greater New York received the quota decided upon, and it has been more widely distributed among household users than ever before.

BIDS FOR COTTON GOODS.

On Some Asked by the Government the Response Was Small.

One of the outstanding features of the first public opening of bids for bandage cloths, twills, and drills for Government use, which took place here yesterday, was the small response of bidders on 38½-inch 44-40, 8.20-yard goods. Bids were asked on 78,000,000 yards of these goods, and less than 25,000,000 yards were covered by the replies received. There were but 21 bids on this construction, none of which came from the Fall River mills. The bulk of the bids were put in at the Government maximum figure of 10¼ cents a yard, where a tentative price subject to official repricing on Oct. 1 was not given, except in the case of Johnson & Johnson, who bid for 800,000 yards at 10¼ cents.

There were but six bidders on 38½-inch 64-60s, all of whom bid the maximum figure of 15¼ cents. Fall River was silent on this construction also, but the mills there were very much in evidence in the bidding for about 78,000,000 yards of assorted 36-inch low-count gauze constructions. In all cases but one the maximum figure was bid for these goods, the exception being a bid for 3,000,000 yards of one of the constructions wanted at an eighth under the general price. Few bids for twills and drills were received, and were generally at maximum Government prices. All of the goods sought are wanted for delivery in the last quarter of this year. Colonel Hirsch of the Quartermaster's Department presided.

Among the comments heard after the bids were opened were several to the effect that the trade favored the publicity given them, this being the first time that this action had been taken. Comment was also made regarding the limited number of bidders, there being only about 30, exclusive of the Fall River mills, which bid through a representative of the Manufacturers' Association of that place.

NEW YORK'S EXPORTS INCREASED IN JULY

Food, Steel, Copper, and Machinery for War Needs Send Total to $234,386,123.

Improvement in ocean tonnage caused exports from New York in July to rise considerably above July, 1917, and recent months of this year. According to Custom House figures given out yesterday the port's shipments last month were $234,386,123, against $208,868,078 in July a year ago, and $201,932,015 in June.

While certain neutrals appeared to fare better, the figures indicated that the Allies were receiving preferential treatment. Foods, steel, copper, brass, cotton, and other commodities needed for war went across the Atlantic in large quantities.

Among the foods exported in July, mostly for the Allies and Belgian relief, were 953,620 barrels of wheat flour costing $10,616,882; 264,047 barrels rye flour, 11,130,909 pounds canned beef, 24,185,657 pounds fresh beef, 88,695,686 pounds bacon, 32,089,184 pounds cured hams, 58,000,483 pounds lard, and 23,304,894 pounds condensed milk. England in July was the largest foreign buyer of bacon here, aggregating 49,339,491 pounds, while Belgium received 16,701,298 pounds. Cheese exports amounted to 4,354,313 pounds.

The urgent demand abroad for iron, steel, and copper was reflected in these exports: Steel bars, 13,455,011 pounds; billets and ingots, 33,845 tons; wire rods, 8,635,551 pounds; bar iron, 3,989,151 pounds; loaded shells and projectiles and other explosives, $241,587; loaded cartridges, $902,895; steel plates, 59,121,596 pounds; barbed wire, 22,223,639 pounds; iron sheets and plates, 3,515,807 pounds; galvanized sheets, 6,057,895 pounds; wrought pipes and fittings, 7,218,655 pounds; cast pipes and fittings, 4,900,388 pounds; refined copper, 46,177,951 pounds, machinery in many forms, and forty-eight steam locomotives, the latter valued at $1,485,375. Of the locomotives, thirty-four were understood to be for use back of the American lines in France.

Parts of airplanes shipped overseas had a value in July of $1,754,872. Of the total, England took parts of airplanes manifested at $1,720,878; Italy, $17,500; France, $8,086, and Brazil, $8,400. Upland cotton exports last month reached 30,038,204 pounds, of which England took 21,112 bales, Portugal 19,565 bales, Italy 6,028,474 pounds, and France 2,758,137 pounds. Cotton linters went out of the port last month to the extent of 3,731,692 pounds.

Oil shipments included 10,695,339 gallons of gasoline, 522,600 gallons of crude oil, 12,902,757 gallons of lubricating oil, and 19,982,057 gallons of illuminating oil. Refined sugar exports were set down at 12,027,597 pounds, while 239 commercial automobiles and 1,610 passenger automobiles left here in the period.

COMMODITIES PRICES.

Revisions of Those of Foodstuffs a Feature of the Week.

The revisions in foodstuffs prices, which were almost equally divided between advances and declines, were easily the feature of this week's changes in wholesale quotations on standard commodities. While, according to Dun's list, the total of changes was smaller this week than last, there was a larger proportion of advances included in it.

The following table gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on forty standard commodities this week at this city, unless otherwise specified. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

†Government basis.

More than half of the week's revisions were confined to the foodstuffs, fifteen of the thirty-three advances and thirteen of the nineteen declines being confined to this part of the list. Both Spring and Winter 100 per cent. flour were down 15 cents a barrel here. In the Chicago provisions market mess pork and short ribs were unchanged. Live sheep declined, while live hogs and live beef advanced. Middle West lard also went up, as did hams and bacon at this city.

Fresh apples were cheaper, and choice dried ones advanced, but these were the only changes in the fruits. All of the revisions in the vegetables were downward, and they included Scotch peas, choice marrow, medium, pea and red and white kidney beans, rutabagas, turnips and new potatoes. Despite a drop of 25 cents a barrel in the price of the last named, they are still $1 a barrel higher than at this time a year ago.

The week's only drop in the dairy products came in fancy nearby eggs, which broke two cents a dozen, but which still cost 13 cents more a dozen than at this time in 1917. Western eggs, on the other hand, went up two cents a dozen. The best grade of butter listed was higher, and the same was true of renovated stock. Both fine and medium cheese advanced. Both of the basic grades of Brazilian coffee were higher, but there were no changes in teas, in sugar, or in spices. In the grains corn produced the only decline, while the advances were supplied by malt, oats and rye.

Eight advances and five declines were seen in the combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils, the features including a rise in menthol and a break of $1 a pound in the jobbing price of opium. It now stands at $21.50 a pound, as compared with $23 at this time last year. Leather prices continued unchanged, but in the hides higher figures were quoted on No. 1 country steers, No. 1 heavy cows, and No. 1 buffs.

Metals changes were again few in number, consisting solely of advances in antimony and spelter. In the naval stores there were also two advances, these being in resin and turpentine. The textile markets were almost bare of features this week. The lull in burlap buying continued, but reports of a firm market at Calcutta were sufficient to keep quotations steady here. In the cotton goods there was not a great deal doing, aside from resales of standard constructions of staple printcloths—notably 39-inch 68-72s and 38½-inch 64-60s—at prices substantially higher than those the mills are allowed to sell the same goods at.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The cyclonic depression of Thursday evening in the upper lake region has diminished considerably in intensity, although it still exists as a trough of low pressure that stretches southward into Texas. An area of high pressure is moving southeastward over the Missouri Valley. Numerous thunder showers have occurred in a narrow belt extending eastward from Missouri to Western Pennsylvania, and there have also been thunder showers in the south Atlantic States, Tennessee, Arkansas, and Oklahoma.

It is cooler over the shower area and temperatures are close to normal elsewhere east of the Mississippi.

Showers are probable Saturday in the lower lake region, the Middle Atlantic States, and the upper Ohio Valley and the weather will be generally unsettled on Sunday in Atlantic coast districts north of the Carolinas.

Aside from temporary cooling by scattered rains temperature will continue practically as at present Saturday and Sunday.

Winds for Saturday and Sunday along the North and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be light south, with fair weather; South Atlantic Coast, gentle southwest to west, thunder showers.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York—Partly cloudy Saturday, probably thunder showers in the western and northern portions; Sunday, probably showers.

Southern New England—Fair Saturday; Sunday probably local rains and thunder showers; not much change in temperature.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Local rains and thunder showers Saturday and probably Sunday; not much change in temperature.

Western New York—Probably local rains and thunder showers Saturday and Sunday.

Northern New England—Fair Saturday except for rains in Vermont; Sunday showers.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

U-BOAT'S SHRAPNEL RAINS ON SHIP'S DECK

Women and Children in Lifebelts Line Rail During Two-Hour Bombardment at Sea.

SAVED BY AMERICAN CHASER

Captain's Zigzag Manoeuvring Prevents German Gunners from Making Direct Hit.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 30.—The first account of the attack on a passenger liner bound for a South American port with 350 passengers on board, including 100 officers and men of the United States Navy on their way to join the South Atlantic Fleet, was brought here today by a British steamship which touched at a West Indian island where the passenger ship was coaling.

For more than two hours the U-boat shelled the vessel with shrapnel as well as solid shot in an effort to sink her before help could arrive, as the German commander could hear the S O S calls going out and his gunners could not shoot away the wireless apparatus. The men, women, and children, all wearing lifebelts, stood by the lifeboats on the top deck until the shrapnel fell so thickly that the Captain ordered them to go below to the next deck, where there was more shelter. For thirty miles the steamship manoeuvred at top speed while the shells fell about her. Twenty-five American seamen went below into the stoke hole and worked with the ship's crew to get every pound of steam possible. When nearly all on board had given up hope a United States destroyer came to the rescue, and the U-boat dived out of sight. After the excitement was all over the passengers went to the bridge and congratulated the Captain, to whose skill and judgment they owed their lives. He replied: "God did it. God alone can perform such miracles."

Story of the Attack.

The following is an account given by an American engineer, who was one of the first cabin passengers, to the Captain of the vessel who brought it here today:

"About 8 o'clock in the morning, when the ship was about 150 miles off the Virginia Capes, I was walking on the top deck to get an appetite for breakfast, when a quartermaster, who had just come down from the bridge, pointed to a low-lying craft about three miles away on the port side, and said: 'Do you think it is a submarine?' Before I could answer his query," the American continued, "there was a flash and a puff of white smoke, and a solid shot dropped into the smooth sea within twenty feet of the ship's side amidships. The Captain, who was on the bridge, thought that it was an American patrol boat which was not quite certain of our nationality and had tried to fire across our bows as a warning to stop. Seen through the glasses in the bright sunlight, the stranger had the appearance of a small destroyer. She had one tall funnel and a small superstructure forward resembling a bridge. We had stopped immediately after the shot was fired, and as the stranger craft approached shrapnel shell was fired from her bow gun, which burst right over the bridge.

Disguise Falls Away.

"At the same time her funnel and bridge arrangement toppled down, and we could see that she was a German submarine, disguised with a canvas funnel and superstructure to resemble a patrol boat. The after gun on the deck of the U-boat opened fire, and several shells were aimed at our wireless apparatus to cripple it so that we could not call for help. The Hun gunners were bad shots, and our operator in his little house on the top deck kept sending S O S calls. The shrapnel fell all about the bridge and rigging of the foremast and on the deck like rain from stem to stern. No answer came to the calls for help, and we all began to feel anxious about our fate as the submarine continued to fire shell after shell from both guns. By this time the Captain had decided that the only way to save his ship was to go at full speed and change direction as often as possible to thwart the enemy's aim. With the aid of twenty-five American sailors in the stoke hole the vessel got up a speed of fifteen knots and answered her helm like a top. As we were beginning to despair of getting any assistance in time an answer came which read: 'This is a land station. Four destroyers are rushing to you.' The good news was circulated rapidly among the passengers on deck, and one American woman went into the drawing room and rattled off a number of patriotic airs on the piano, which had a cheering effect on everybody. Our chief anxiety was whether we could stay afloat until help arrived. One shell exploded with a nerve-racking scream right over the deck, throwing five of the passengers flat on their faces. One piece of shrapnel the size of a hen's egg struck the Captain on the back as he was standing by the steering wheel on the bridge, but did not scratch him. We examined the piece afterward when the excitement was over, with other lumps of metal left on the decks by the Huns.

"The passengers were ordered to stand by the lifeboats with their lifebelts on and not to take any baggage. The officers and men of the American Navy had their belts on too, and wore only their trousers and flannel undervests, so that they would be ready to help save the women and children when the boats were lowered away. Everything was done quietly and in an orderly manner. The women were calm and the children gazed in wonder at the exploding shells. Passengers who were asleep at the time of the attack came on deck with lifebelts buckled round their bathrobes, and did not go below again. Some passengers said that it would be of no use to get into the boats because the Huns were firing on helpless women and children, and would surely shell us when we left the ship, especially as we had officers and men from the navy on board.

American Destroyer Arrives.

"The shrapnel shelling became so heavy that we were ordered off the deck to take shelter in the saloons below. The gunners aimed at us frequently with solid shot, but could not hit the ship apparently because of the zig-zagging.

"Two hours had passed, and all hope of being saved had nearly gone, when the lookout in the crow's nest yelled: 'Smoke on the horizon on the starboard quarter!' The Captain looked through his glasses, and said he thought it must be the American destroyers coming to our rescue. A few minutes more and there was no doubt of it. A big destroyer was coming at a speed of forty knots, and was within five miles of us. The submarine could not see the warship coming, and fired on with both guns. The commander of the destroyer saw the enemy craft, and got up under the lee of our ship till she was close up. Directly the Hun commander saw the game was up he submerged just as the destroyer swung with such a way on that she could not stop. My, how our people did yell and cheer to see the Stars and Stripes flying at her stern. It was the most thrilling moment of our lives.

"After all the danger was over many of the women and not a few of the men wept when they thought of the danger they had escaped, and I think there were very few who did not agree with the modest ship Captain when he said in reply to our thanks that it was God, and God alone, who could do such miracles."

REJECTS DECISION OF WAR LABOR BOARD

Smith & Wesson Company Would Rather Have Plant Taken Over Than Abide by It.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Refusing to concede that the War Labor Board has any authority to compel it to change "its usual and efficient method of conducting its business," and being unwilling voluntarily to conduct that business under the rules laid down by the board, the Smith & Wesson Company of Springfield, Mass., has tendered its arms plant to the Government. The company is now engaged in the manufacture of more than 250,000 revolvers for the American fighting forces in France and employs about 1,400 persons.

For the last fourteen years the Smith & Wesson Company has run its plant as a nonunion shop. Recently the company discharged eight employes who had violated the written contract made by every employe of the company that he would not, while so employed, join a labor union without giving a week's notice in writing.

The War Department asked the National War Labor Board to investigate the situation. The board, after a hearing, made its recommendation to the company, asking it to discontinue the practice of making individual contracts with its employes, to reinstate all discharged employes with back pay, to form committees authorized to present grievances and to mediate with the company, and substitute the decision of an examiner for executive control.

The company has declined voluntarily to do this, and rather than do so has tendered its plant to the Government, the management at the same time offering co-operation to maintain production. In a letter to Secretary Baker the company said it had not submitted its rights to the War Labor Board, did not admit the board had conducted the brief investigation which preceded its decision in accordance with President Wilson's labor proclamation, and saw no reason why it should abandon its methods of doing business. In addition to its notice to Secretary Baker the company also protested formally to the War Labor Board upon the decision and expressed a refusal to abide by it.

In its letter addressed to the War Secretary the company asserted that its business history had been "singularly free" from labor troubles, and that its Board of Trustees saw no reason "why it should abandon methods of doing business proved to be conducive to industrial peace and high efficiency for the fantastic method outlined by the War Labor Board in its recommendations for dealing with employes."

These recommendations, it concluded, in addressing the board, "would tend to lessen if not destroy the morale of the workers; would promote argument and dissension, would impair the general efficiency of workers, thereby reducing the production so badly needed by our country."

"It is generally recognized by employers in this part of the country," said the letter to Secretary Baker, "that since the promulgation of the War Labor Board principles labor union leaders look upon that declaration as a license to agitate, and to organize the employes of any or every plant engaged in war work irrespective of the known conditions under which any given plant may have been operated, and irrespective of the legal rights of employers."

BRIDGEPORT MACHINISTS OUT.

Strike in Protest Against Decision of War Labor Board.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 30.—Some 5,000 machinists in different factories where war work is being pushed feverishly went out on a strike today in protest to the recent award of the War Labor Board which increased all wages under 78 cents an hour, but does not establish any rate above that. A minimum rate for men, skilled or unskilled, at 42 cents, and for women over 18, 32 cents an hour was established. The award does not change the classification of the machinists, which the union machinists asked for.

The strikers met this afternoon and voted to call out the workers in all shops in the city, including some dozen small shops which entered into an agreement today with the local lodge of International Machinists to pay the minimum rate of 80 cents an hour for toolmakers and 70 cents for machinists. It also includes the machinists in the Lake Torpedo Boat Company, which heretofore has been outside of the entire controversy as its employes come under the ruling of the Shipping Board.

The Manufacturers Association has reaffirmed its agreement with the Taft-Walsh Board to abide by the award and propose to fight the strike, which has been brewing for some years. The decision of the War Labor Board was delayed a considerable time because it was evenly divided on the points over which the local machinists strike today. The board called in Otto M. Eidlitz as umpire, who gave out the final award.

STOPS SALE OF GOLD FOR TRADE PURPOSES

Government Order to be Followed by Bill for Control of Nation's Supply.

DRAIN WORRIES WASHINGTON

Demand Partly Explained by Big Purchases of Low-Priced Jewelry by Munition Workers.

Government measures to conserve the gold resources of the country developed along a new angle yesterday, when the local Assay Office was directed to stop selling the precious metal for commercial purposes. Not an ounce of bar gold was available for the wholesale jewelry trade, the manufacturers of dental goods and other users who heretofore have been able to obtain adequate supplies. As it was the first step taken to limit the consumption of gold in domestic manufacturing, the wholesale jewelry trade received the news with considerable apprehension as to the future prospect of business during the war period.

The order to Verne M. Bovie, Superintendent of the Assay Office, was delivered in person by Roy Baker, Director of the Mint, who arrived from Washington on Thursday night. It was learned that the complete stoppage or sales of bar gold was preliminary to the presentation of a measure in Congress, which is expected to appear next Tuesday, that will provide for the control of the disposition of the gold supply within the country. The Federal Reserve Board, acting for the Treasury Department, already supervises the withdrawal of gold from Federal agencies and the banks for export.

While no explanation for the cessation of sales was obtainable from Government officials, it was supposed in the financial district that gold had lately been taken from the Assay Office on so large a scale as to attract attention at Washington. In the last fiscal year the market value of bar gold sold to the commercial trades at New York was $55,000,000, a total about $12,000,000 larger than in the preceding year. Since July 1, it was learned, the absorption of the metal had displayed a further expansion. Manufacturers of low-priced jewelry are understood to have experienced a steady growth of business during the period since workers in munition plants and industrial lines have been receiving extraordinary wages, allowing a greater margin than in ordinary times for the purchase of trinkets.

Inquirers at the Assay Office could learn nothing more than that no gold was to be sold as long as the order was in effect. Nothing was known, it was said, as to the probable length of time the ban would be in force, as no details other than the order had been received from Washington. Metal smelting and mining companies which had sent gold bullion to the Assay Office to be refined were able to get the metal due them, as they were the original owners, and were not seeking to take additional supplies.

The reason for the broadening of the demand for some months past is not altogether understood by dealers in precious metals, and the suggestion was made yesterday that sales had been stopped in order to allow time for an investigation of the situation. Gold can only be acquired at the Assay Office on the presentation for exchange of gold coin or gold certificates, and this process upset a theory held in the Street that bar gold might have been bought for hoarding.

Officials of jewelry concerns in Newark, which is a jewelry manufacturing centre, were greatly concerned over the order to stop the sale of gold for trade purposes, because it will mean the closing of their plants within a week.

"Jewelers here do not carry more than a week's supply of gold because of the danger of robbery," one Newark manufacturer said. "Should this order be kept in effect many of our plants will be closed and thousands will be out of work. A few departments of some of the factories are working on Government contracts and they would keep running as long as possible. Some of the factories will have to melt up all the old stock in order to keep going a few days longer."

FEDERAL AGENTS RAID LEGAL ADVICE BUREAU

Action Is Part of Nation-Wide Movement to Put an End to Anti-War Agitation.

Agents of the Department of Justice, acting on a search warrant issued by United States Commissioner Hitchcock, raided the offices of the New York Bureau of Legal Advice, on the eighth floor of the office building at 70 Fifth Avenue, last night. This raid is a part of a nation-wide movement to put an end to anti-war agitation and pro-German propaganda.

Documents seized last night showed that John L. Elliott is Chairman of the bureau; Arthur S. Leeds, Treasurer, and Miss Fannie Witherspoon, Secretary. On the Executive Committee are the Rev. John W. Darr, Miss Fola LaFollette, a daughter of the Wisconsin Senator; Jacob Hillquit, said to be a relative of Morris Hillquit, the local Socialist leader; Miss Martha Gruening, Dr. Henry Newman, Tracy D. Mygatt, Miss Jessie Ashley, and Roger N. Baldwin.

The only person in the offices when the Department of Justice agents arrived there last night was a young woman, who said she was Miss Joy Young, Acting Secretary in the absence of Miss Witherspoon. One of the principal activities of the societies, the agents said last night, was to represent men of draft age who seek exemption as conscientious objectors to war.

REACH NEW POINT IN ARCTIC

Stefansson Says His Aid, Storkerson, Penetrated Far Into Unknown Territory.

DAWSON, Yukon, Aug. 30.—Vilhjalmar Stefansson, who arrived here yesterday en route to Esquimalt to make his report, reports no definite news from Storkerson, his assistant, who left Herschell Island last Winter. Storkerson last sent back word in April that he had reached a point 175 miles north of the Alaskan coast, opposite Cross Island. That location is 100 miles beyond the Leffingwell-Mikkelson party's advance point, the furthest north ever reached in that section of the arctic.

Stefansson believes that Storkerson traveled easterly trying to reach Melville Island, which is 600 miles further across the ice, being one of the longest journeys ever attempted over arctic ice. Storkerson had three Eskimos and two sleds of supplies when last heard from, and with good luck he may have reached Melville.

Stefansson is looking well, but says it probably will be a year yet before his old-time physical endurance returns, when he hopes again to resume arctic explorations. He was ill with typhoid at Herschell last January. This was followed by pneumonia and pleurisy. When convalescent, yet weak, he traveled four weeks with the Canadian Mounted Police and Eskimos with dogs over mountains covered with snow to Porcupine River and thence to Fort Yukon, where he took treatment for 150 days.

He said he was anxious to help the allied cause, and believed he could best accomplish this by Red Cross lectures. He intends to make a Red Cross tour beginning in New York about October.

It Or The Opposite?
A Straight-From-The-Shoulder, Straight-To-The-Soldier Appeal To Army and Navy Officers

EVERY Officer wearing the Livery of Uncle Sam wants to be It, not the opposite; the whistle, not the echo; the melody, not the accompaniment; the kite, not the tail; the Big Finger, not the little toe. That's Pride of Personality.

Pride of Personality on the part of American Army Officers has made me the Largest Tailor of Custom-to-Measure Uniforms in New York. I can't put the slashing swank, splendid set-up and sleek fit of my Outfits into print, but I can put them on your back.

Gabardine Uniform to individual measure, $30.00
Serge Uniform to individual measure, $35.00
Whipcord Uniform to individual measure, $40.00
Deliveries on 2 days' notice, if required.

FROM Mobile Bay to Manila Bay and down to to-day, the American Navy Officer is a stickler for the issimo degree of sailorly trigness in his dress. Style, Fit and Upstanding Bearing are indissolubly bound up with our Soldiers of the Deep.

Navy Officers' Uniforms are not a side-line with me, but a main line. I am scrupulously observant of the correct regulations, but that's nothing to boast of. The thoroughbred style, curve-chumming fit and bluff breeziness of my Uniforms carry with them a hint of the salt and spray of the sea.

Ensigns' Uniforms (Standard Navy Serge), $40.00
Ensigns' Overcoats (30-oz. Kersey), $45.00
Deliveries on 2 days' notice, if required.

When the U.S. Government Standardizes Hats—

DO you think the Government will accept your Standard?

If you have been paying more than is necessary to get all you want in a hat—before the War—Uncle Sam will show you how to avoid wastefulness and extravagance and how to get along without a few unnecessary luxuries—before the War is over.

The War Industries Board have standardized shoes for next year and they had a conference with hat manufacturers a few days ago in Washington to do the same thing in the hat business.

I haven't any inside information but I think they will come pretty near adopting my standard, when they decide to make a serviceable hat, with plenty of style, at a reasonable price.

That's the policy I have maintained since I started in business and my hats are good enough for anyone and they're all—$2.85.
